opportunity to re-visit the places with which an acquaintance has already been made on the journey north. The trip occupies about eight days, and with the exception of a short reach crossing Queen Charlotte Sound, the route is inland and the water calm, the passengers thereby receiving all the benefits of an ocean voyage and escaping all its distressing inconveniences. In this way Vancouver is reached and the trip is over, the passengers disembarking with a consciousness of time well spent among sights worth seeing.
