Some men are so lazy even a vacation tires them.

Action may not always be happiness, but there is no happiness without action.

An aged Scotch minister, about to marry for the fourth time, was explaining his reason to an elder. "You see, I am an old man now, and I canna expect to be here verra lang. When the end comes I wad like to hae someone to close my eyes." The elder nodded, and said, "Aweel, minister, I hae had two wives, an' baith of them opened mine!"

AYRSHIRE HERDBOOK.

From Mr. J. W. Nimmo, Registrar of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association, National Records, Ottawa, we have received a copy of volume 15. It contains the pedigrees of 1,893 cows and bulls, minutes of the annual meetings, record of performance, scale of points, history of the association, etc., together with portraits of the President, Mr. Alex. Hume, and the Secretary, Mr. W. F. Stephen. Typographically and otherwise, the volume is a most creditable one, and will be appreciated by all lovers and breeders of the Scottish dairy cattle.

While I was a student in the medical college I had a patient, an Irishman, with a broken leg. When the plaster bandage was removed and a lighter one put on in the place, I noticed that one of the pins went in with great difficulty, and I could not understand it. A week afterward what was my astonishment to find that the pin had been run through the skin twice, instead of through the cloth.

"Why, Pat," said I, "didn't you know the pin was sticking in you?"
"To be sure I did," replied Pat. "But I thought you knew your business, so I hit me tongue."

The Belgian "Revue de Cavalerie" estimates the horse population of the world at 80,000,000, of which 41,000,000 are in Europe, 19,000,000 in North America, 11,000,000 in Asia, 6,000,000 in South and Central America, 2,000,000 in Australia, and 1,250,000 in Africa. The horse population of Europe is estimated as follows: Russia, 22,000,000; Germany, 4,184,000; Austro-Hungary, 4,020,000; Great Britain, 3,000,000; France, 2,900,000; Roumania, 864,000; Italy, 742,000; Sweden, 525,000; Denmark, 449,000; Spain, 397,000; Bulgaria, 344,000; Turkey, 300,000; Holland, 285,000; Belgium, 241,000; Portugal, 220,000; Servia, 180,000; Norway, 151,000; Switzerland, 109,000; and Greece, 100,000.

USES FOR COAL ASHES ON THE FARM.

William B. Cary, of Connecticut, contributes to the Tribune Farmer his experience with coal ashes. He has found a marked effect in applying sifted coal ashes to the surface of a clay hillside, on which grow raspberries, blackberries and grapes. The ashes have acted as mulch to keep the surface open and friable. He also recommends coal ashes as the foundation for walks and drives, the ashes to be covered with gravel.

They are better for foundations than gravel, because they pack together and form a surface which is not favorable to the growth of grass or weeds, and a layer of gravel on top works down among them and compacts itself finely.

He narrates his experience as follows: "Our district wanted a sidewalk on a hillside, up and down which automobiles rush at all hours of the day, making it dangerous for school children, to say nothing of other pedestrians. We dug out the side of a bank, levelled a walk along it, extending it from the foot to the top of the hill, about nine hundred feet long, and spread a thick layer of factory cinders on it, beating the big clinkers down into it, raking it off and rolling it, and afterward covering it generously with gravel."

"Of course, there was opposition. There always will be opposition to doing anything new or different from the existing order of things in old settled communities. There was laughter and plenty of prophecy that the rains would wash out the bank and the frosts would heave it so that the work expended would be worse than useless. That walk has grown harder and better every year. It has held the bank from washing down, and the frost does not heave it. It has proved to be a great comfort to the school children, and is patronized by all pedestrians. The cost of it to date has not exceeded $70 for 900 feet of its length. The cinders were given to us by the factory, as they will cheerfully be given by any factory to those who will cart them out of the way. This and much more may be said for coal ashes as foundations for walks and roads on the farm or along the highway."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

SILVER AND SILVER-LACED WYANDOTTES - MINORCA COCK WITH DROOPING COMB.

1. Is there any difference between Silver and Silver-laced Wyandottes?
2. Is a Black Minorca with his comb lying down a little any good for showing purposes?
T. M.

Ans.—1. The American Standard of Perfection describes Silver and Silver-laced but not Silver-laced Wyandottes. The colors of the two breeds, though corresponding in general pattern, differ noticeably in the details of feather markings.

2. Exhibited with his comb lying over the bird would be heavily discounted in any kind of competition, but you can straighten the comb by stitching a couple of pieces of cardboard, one on each side, sewing right through the comb. Half an hour before the judge comes around, clip the silk threads and remove the cardboard. This is one of the many tricks of the trade, recommended by an experienced poultryman.

SALT FOR BINDWEED.

I have about 15 patches of bindweed in about 4 acres of land. These patches vary from 20 to 60 feet in diameter. The ground has been in sod for 10 years. Plowed it this spring, and am running over it every few days with a disk harrow, and the ground is like an ash bed. I have been trying the smothering process, but it seems to grow faster. It requires to be disked every second day, and I don't believe that will keep it all down. I know a man who summer-fallowed it for three years, and then had to salt it. I am deciding to salt mine. What do you think about it? Will salt sown $\frac{1}{2}$ of an inch kill it completely, or will it need to be sown heavier? Is the coarse salt as strong as the fine salt in barrels?
K. C.

Ans.—Summer-fallowing, if persisted in, will certainly kill bindweed, though for a time it may seem to flourish as a result of the cultivation. We would suggest the use of a broad-share cultivator instead of a disk harrow. The first season may not eradicate it completely, but the second should do so. Salt will kill almost any weed, but if applied strong enough to kill bindweed it would probably have equally disastrous effects on the crops planted the next few years, except mangels. Coarse salt is as good as fine salt. Never having tried salting bindweed, we cannot speak confidently of the amount required. Try different applications on a small scale at first, and report results.

Veterinary.

DISTEMPER - IRREGULAR SUPPLY OF MILK.

1. Dog, three months old, has lost the use of his limbs. His neck is stiff, and his body seems sore. He takes convulsions and coughs.

2. Cow gives a large flow of milk for a few days, and then gives very little for a few milkings, etc., etc.

G. H.

Ans.—1. The dog has distemper, which requires prompt treatment. It is doubtful whether treatment will be of any use now. Keep him comfortable. Give him an emetic of 5 grains each sulphate of zinc, calomel and tartar emetic in 2 ounces warm water. Follow up with 1 grain quinine and 3 grains nitrate of potash three times daily. Apply cloths wrung out of hot water to his neck, and give him anything he will eat. This disease is liable to various complications, which require treatment according to symptoms, hence I would advise you to call your veterinarian in.

2. This is a remarkable condition. There is no disease known to veterinary science that causes it. It must be due either to local conditions, or to some inherent peculiarity in the cow. All that you can do is see that she is kindly treated, gets the same quantity of food at regular intervals, and is milked at regular intervals. If the bowels are constipated, give her a purgative of 1 1/2 lbs. Epsom salts and 2 ounces ginger. V.
