Figuratively speaking, we also place upon the pedestal of our imagination, those high ideals, those lofty aspirations, by which, in our more thoughtful moments, we would wish to guide our conduct.

Among those guiding principles, why not place upon a pedestal of its own, an ideal that may be better described as "Canada First," rather than "Made in Canada."

Were Taken in by the Police Last Evening and Detained for personal effects by way of baggage and somewhat unseasonably attired in pants and sweater coats, also wearing soft hats. The local police got suspicious of their obvious simplicity and nature and lest they be set upon by unscrupulous persons they hailed them to the jail where they rested all night. They were good natured, even jocose as the sergeant searched them and appeared little perturbed with the trend events had taken. The contents of their pockets were motley but scarcely could be described as dangerous. A prayer book, a box of Turkish cigarettes and some odds and ends, including an ancient -relic of a hair comb and about $50 in cash, and they were minus that necessity of aliens a parole card. A paper relating ta previous residence in Pennsylvania and a note to the station agent at Hamiltno, together with transporation forms, which led in one way and that way the road to United States. They had come from Welland and appeared to understand little English, though their actions when under police surviellance were perhaps reminiscent of former police encounters and a military training. Smilingly they submitted and with charming acquiescence were ushered into their narrow abode. Nothing may be wrong, but on the other hand such careful vigilance on the part of the local police is highly commendable and thoroughness of this description is one of Chief Slemin's attributes.

Public opinion is not so sure of this, for, despite the rigors of the censorship, the news is trickling through of enormous losses sustained. Fear are expressed whether the German forces are strong enough to stand many more weeks of such frightful slaughter.
