A Moral Influence. A certain cheese factory neighborhood in New York where the Babcock test has been adopted by the patrons for two weeks, two maiden ladies who own a fine dairy farm and a herd of cows had been sending milk which tested 2.8 before the adoption of the test. In three weeks their milk came up to 3.4. The ladies were zealous members of the church. A frank and outspoken young man was asked by his mother to go to church and not spend his time as assistant at the Sunday morning. "What objection have you, mother," said he, "to my doing this honest work on Sunday morning?" "Well," said the mother, "I do not think that Babcock test work has a good moral influence over you." "See here, mother," replied the young man, "where there are two old maids, and the minister has been preaching to them for years, and their milk has been as poor as water, but the Babcock test has brought them round to the moral scratch line in two weeks. What do you think of the last now?" The old lady said she had never heard before that the Babcock test was considered such an effective means of grace and reform.

Frankville Fair

A Great Gathering of Farmers and Visitors Assemble at Kitley's Farms

Success, in capital letters, was written over Kitley's annual fall exhibition held at Frankville on Thursday and Friday last. The weather on both days was superb, and the result was a large exhibit and a great crowd of visitors. It was thought by some that the Lyndhurst fair taking place on the same day would be felt in a decrease of both exhibits and gate receipts; but as a matter of fact the attendance was fully up to the average and though the number of entries fell slightly behind that of the last year no one who examined the big display in all departments would suspect it was the case.

The lower flat of the main building contained its usual quota of exhibits, the only decrease noticeable being in the display of flowers, and the very poor light provided may in part account for this. The exhibits in the upper gallery, however, were fully up to the average and though the number of entries fell slightly behind that of the last year no one who examined the big display in all departments would suspect it was the case.

Mrs. Wesley Chant, of Lyn, met with rather a serious mishap on Thursday last while returning from a visit with friends at Chantry. In company with a little boy she was driving home by way of Athens and had reached the corner of Joseph and Mill sts. when the horse shied, overturned the buggy and precipitated the two occupants into the ditch at the side of the road. The little boy escaped injury, but Mrs. Chant was bruised and rendered insensible. She regained consciousness shortly after under treatment by Dr. S. S. Cornell and has since been removed to her home.

Japan and China are vying on war on a gigantic scale. The Japanese are having trouble with the Russians of their colonial possessions. In Russian troops are pursuing in Chinese territory a gang of marauders who destroyed a Siberian railway station; Portugal has a little war on hand; French and British expeditions have been dispatched for the purpose of taking possession of the same territory in Africa, and France is preparing for operations which are directed towards the status of a French colony. There is plenty of inflammable material for a big conflagration.

John Chinaman's Novel Oath. A few days ago Ting Kee, a laundryman of Montreal, appeared before the judge in response to a call to defend a suit which he had entered for damages to his property. The case was very interesting to the spectators on account of the unique manner in which the Chinese to k the oath. Ting Kee stepped into the box, a china sword of very pretty pattern was handed to him, he broke it on the floor and Judge Duggess recited the following formula: "You swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The sword is broken, may your soul be cracked into as many pieces as the sword is if you do not tell the truth." Then Ting Kee told his story. Who Ting Kee, his assistant, took the oath and corroborated Ting Kee's story. In taking the oath he was unfortunate, a piece of the sword cutting his hand.

An Oxford Mills Ghost. From Kempville comes a ghost story of the old-fashioned sort. It is said that in the house of a farmer named Code, a man well-to-do and intelligent, mysterious noises are heard by night, resembling the rattle of wagon wheels. The source of these strange occurrences is Oxford Mills, a small place not many miles from Kempville. It is said they have been going on these three years, but unwilling to be made the objects of rural curiosity, the Codes kept the matter to themselves. The family secret, however, was betrayed by a visitor. Informed by a dreadful rattle in the dead of night, the stranger naturally inquired the cause. He was told that the mystery of these sounds had never been fathomed. About three years ago, as said, these nocturnal ruminations commenced, and every possible test was applied to ascertain and locate their source, without avail; and it was not until all theories and devices had been exhausted that the family agreed that the sounds were of unsteady origin. The rumblings are said to resemble the sounds made by a heavy wagon driven rapidly over a long wooden bridge, quite as loud and distinct as if produced in the very centre of the house.

WHIPPING THE BEINS.

only this man himself was killed, but his whole family and all of his relatives have been terribly punished. His father did all he could to prevent his boy from rising against the king ten years ago, and after his rebellion he went into retirement. He was not killed, but after King's death he was dragged out and his head was cut off. The men of the family, even of the third and fourth generation, were executed and the children, including King's 17-year-old daughter, were given over to the slaves or concubines of the officials. After this rebellion the mothers, the wives and the daughters of all who have taken up arms against the king will become the common property of the government and of the magistrates of the provinces in which they live. They will be dragged from their homes to be concubines and slaves. As their beauty wanes they will be handed from one high official to a lower until they descend to the bottom rung of the government's service. They will have no rights that anybody will be bound to respect, and their only chance of happiness will be in death.

All sorts of crimes are terribly punished in Korea. The truth about such matters is kept as far as possible from the foreigners, and you will find little information about prisons and punishments in any of the books on Korea. There is, in fact, little printed in the country, and the little information which you were only able to obtain to me on account of the letters of introduction which I carried and the kindness of Mr. Everts' in among the people and persisting in my questions and investigations, notwithstanding the objections of the officials.

The cruellest punishments are inflicted for their crimes. They are only cut into two pieces, however, and the law provides that their bodies need not lie on the execution grounds longer than ten days, but their relatives can take them away and bury them.

Strangling is done in a curious way. There is a hole in the door of the cell just large enough for a piece of rope about the size of a clothesline to pass through. A noose is made at the end of the rope, and this noose is placed around the criminal's neck. The end of the rope is put through the hole in the door of the wall, and the police pull at the rope until they bring the man's chest and neck above and below the hole and until the neck breaks and the man is dead.

Another method of execution is by suffocation. This, strange as it is, is done with paper. The man is laid flat upon his back, and a sheet of Korean paper is spread over his face. This has been soaked in water, and its over the man's face, being pressed down so that it makes a veritable death mask, shutting out every bit of air, and the man dies. Anyone who has seen the paper of Korea will appreciate how easily this form of execution could be carried out. It is made by hand. It is as thick as a sheet of blotting paper and almost as strong as leather. When moisture is applied to it it becomes exceedingly soft, but does not lose its strength, and it would make an excellent molding material.

Among the most terrible of Korean crimes are those against your parents or ancestors. There is a prison in Seoul that is reserved for those who commit such crimes against their parents. If a rich son refuses to support his father he can be sent to jail, and the boy who strikes his father is whipped to death. The parents are buried to death, and it is in Korea much the same as in China, where the killing of one's parents subjects the child to a similar punishment. In Korea the child is to be killed thirty odd pieces or carried up by inches.

The torturing of prisoners to make them confess is common in Korea, and it is wonderful what inroads of torture are made in times in use. Think of giving a man a bare foot to a stake in the ground and burning his toes with powder. Think of all sorts of dragging and pinching and other tortures in use.
