DEER FORESTS IN SCOTLANO.

Their Value Has Increased Enormous! in Recent Years.

The news despatches tell us that Henry The news despatches tell us that Henry Phipps, of Pittsburg, has rented the famous Glen Quoich deer forest in Scotland. The estate comprises 50,000 acres, or something more than seventy-eight square miles. The papers put the "total rent expenses" at $50,000 a season; but this is a patent exaggeration, although the finances of deer forests are expressed in large figures. At the time of recent computation there were in of recent computation there were in Scotland 110 deer forests, covering a total area of 2,000,000 acres, and bringing an annual rental, if let, of $1,500,- such purposes of sport has been in times past a political question and the world has heard much about the eviction of crofters from their Highland homes by the deer preservets; but there are not wanting, apparently, convincing arrays of figures to prove the assertion that Scotland cannot make better use of its mountain lands than to farm them out as hunting grounds for the deer stalkers, native and foreign.

Of late years, as the demand for deer forests has increased, their values have appreciated enormously, and the rentals of the best forests have grown to such sums that only the very wealthy may enjoy the sport. In the British press there has been some carping that the American millionaire was crowding out the Briti hsdeer etalker; but the landed proprietors, who, after all, are the ones chiefly to be pleased, welcome the Pittsburg dollars at current rates of echange.- Forest and Stream.

"CREEK."

The word "creek" originally meant the tidal estuary of a small river, a place where vessels might find harbor, and it is so used throughout Great Britain today. In certain parts of the United States, notably along the middle and southern Atlantic seaboard, the word has been extended to the small tributary of a river throughout its entire course. In river throughout its entire course. angland these little inland streams are called "brooks," which is clearly their rightful name—shallow watercourses with much tumbling and bickering over stony places. Milton very clearly distinguishes between the two where in "Paradise Regained'

* "And when it yas day, they knew not the land; but they discovered a certain-creek with a shore, into which they were-minded, if it were possible, to thrust in the ship." Here we have the idea of a harbor in the use of the word. It is pos-sible to see how our brooks have come to be called "creeks" when we reflect that south of New England the large rivers have many smaller streams empty into their tidal waters. The mouths these are often deep enough to make a shelter for vessels, and they were un-doubtedly so used by the early settlers. Hence the word "creek" and its extension to the entire stream and to other similar streams far inland throughout a wide extent of country.—Journal of Geo-

There is a widespread complaint in Germany over the high cost of living. Neither Easily Weaned.

It often happens that a farmer has nuch difficulty in weaning a calf, and much difficulty in weaning a calf, and the longer the baby cow is permitted to draw its substance from the maternal fountain the greater the difficulty becomes and the more pathetic is the spectacle presented. So it is with human beings who are compelled to surrender any special privilege in the enjoyment of which they have been uninterrupted for a long time. They lose the capacity to distinguish between a privilege and a vested right, and they set up a whine in vested right, and they set up a whine in which grief and indignation are so mixed as to make a tear-pumping blend.— Washington Post.

Poultry Institute, Spring Pointers.

Press bulletin from the Untario Agri cultural College, Guelph, Can.)
The various speakers at the Institute strongly emphasized the necessity of having vigour in the flock. With strong healthy birds the best results could be looked for if properly fed and housed, but with stock that lacked that brisk appearance so characteristic of the layhen, there was not much hope for profit. The selection of a few of the best winter layers of good breed type was strongly recommended as one of the very best methods for improvement in breeding. The selected hens need no be in large numbers, a half dozen real good ones are plenty and these should be mated to a male from vigorous, heavy laying parents. Selection has been advocated by many for years but in not all cases has it proved satisfac-tory, owing largely to the fact that the farmer confined the selected hens to a mall pen and allowed the large flock free range. The speakers at the insti-tute were all of one mind in regard to free range for breeders. Practically ev ery one's experience is that eggs from free range hens hatch best, therefore, evwould seem good business to allow the mall flock the range of the farm.

Much time was spent on incubation and breeding. Mr. W. H. Day gave a very pleasing and clear tack on the science of incubation, or how a hen hatches eggs. It was shown that the size of the air cell in the large end of the egg might vary greatly in different eggs, even in eggs from the same hen and yet the percentage hatch would be about the same. The weighing of eggs was rehatch the best chicks, for the reason that it was thought by many that chicks hatched under normal evapora-tion had a better chance to live. A hen sitting out of doors upon the ground evaporates about 11, of the weight of the eggs during the process of incuba-It was demonstrated that the average incubator evaporates the water from the eggs in larger quantities. Where one wishes to know exactly what evapo-ration is taking place it is a simple mat-ter to weigh the eggs at the beginning, t the ninth day of incubation when the first test is made, and also on the eighteenth day or about the time the machine is closed. Experiments appeared to indicate that moisture in large quantities was necessary in many ma chines right from the first day of incu-bation until the last day, to keep the loss in weight as low as in the natural process.

The brooding of young chicks was fully discussed at the meetings. There was a common idea among the speakers that chicks should be reared on new ground every year if possible, and un-der no circumstances should young broods of chicks be put upon the ground where other broods had ranged that year. Many weakling and sickly birds were due directly to the common practice of putting brood after brood in the same brooder and never moving the brooder to fresh ground, when a new lot was put in the brooder. For food for brooder chicks, many of the commercial chicken foods were recomnended and when these could not be Those who love peace as well as justice will rejoice in the military reformation of China. "Invalid Crawl" the Latest Walk. (Philadelphia Telegraph.)

Alas! Somebody in England with nothing better to do has invented a new walk, and it is being taken up here. At the start of practice a girl must tie weights to the bottom of her skirt. In walking she must appear to be so weary that she scarcely can drag one foot after another. Her steps must be long and creepy, without the slightest hint of energy. Thus walks Queen Alexandra, who adds a slight limp, as she has been lame since infancy. It is hinted the languid movements were designed to hide that defect. Gowns must be of stuff that gives a clinging effect; then the slow, long step, with a bending of the neck at every stride, will be the most effective.
