TEAS!

Did you ever consider the advantage of buying your TEAS from us? It will pay you, as we can give better values than up-town stores. Why?

Because

Our buying facilities are unequalled, our expenses are less, and we give you the advantage of this in quality. Our reputation for Good Teas is now established, and we guard it jealously.

We are to-day the acknowledged leaders in the Tea Trade.

The Grocer, Queen St., Charlottetown.

The Regina Precision Watches—for which we are the official Selling Agents for this city—are exactly what their name implies. They are of the highest possible precision, and queens among all Watches at their price. They bear a universal guarantee, and everyone of the two hundred Official Regina Agents in Canada will honor that guarantee at any time, regardless of where the Watch may have been bought. You can buy a fully guaranteed Regina Precision Watch, from $8.00 upwards. You should not, under any circumstances, buy a Watch until you have investigated the merits of this remarkably excellent make. One Agent had only two returned to him out of 225 sold, but had 18 returned out of 48 sold of another well known make.

A Divine Visitation.

The recent remarkable story, reported in the Universe, of a young man in Chicago who was stricken deaf and dumb in a moment of blasphemy, reminds the editor of the New World of a similar occurrence which took place in Southwestern Kentucky many years ago.

In 1830, when Sacred Heart Church in Union county, that state, was first erected, anti-Catholic feeling was strong. The afterward famous missionary pastor, Father Elisha J. Darbin, was often insulted while on his lonely rides over a territory that then covered thousands of miles. Sacred Heart Church itself was the first structure of the kind erected west of Louisville and east of the Mississippi River—a little oasis of descendants of the Maryland English Catholics being located in that section.

Among others who often spoke disrespectfully of the upgoing church was a young man named Hossman, Joseph, we believe his name was. After the cross was placed on the spire (about 1833) the Baptists round about were angrier than ever. Late one afternoon Hossman and several companions were passing the church when they happened to notice the large cross of wood poised aloft.

Hossman, who was more daring than the rest, proposed knocking its arms off with rocks, of which there were a good many scattered about. They thought he was too cowardly to do this, and told him so. "Who's afraid of a—R—mish cross?" he cried, and straightaway stooped and buried a stone up at it with all his might. Another and another followed, until at last the cross was struck.

That instant Hossman felt a terrible pain in his right shoulder and neck, and from that hour until the day he died his body retained exactly the posture of a man throwing upward, his right arm slightly extended, his head almost on his right shoulder, his face turned up as if his body curved slightly backward. Soon after this experience Hossman became a Catholic, and was a very pious one, attending Sacred Heart Church regularly. When the editor of the New World was a boy he attended the same church and often saw Hossman and heard old men relate how he became a cripple and a Catholic. Hossman himself was then an old man and had the name of "Old Hooobem"—"hooobed" meaning humped or crooked, in the usage of those descendants of the Maryland English, although the word is in none of our dictionaries. He lived to be at least seventy, and his descendants are all Catholics, or were fifteen years ago.

No doubt modern men of science would undertake to explain away both young Renfro's sudden visitation and that of Hossman but they can never convince the multitude of Christians that such occurrences are merely striking coincidences. Renfro would not credit the theory that his sudden affliction was due to a severe nervous attack. Hossman never believed that his case was merely accidental, like the breaking of an arm or leg. A young Irishman of our acquaintance some years ago had a paralyzed arm suddenly restored while at the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre. "It was merely an accident that it got well then and there," said a free-thinking physician to him after examination. "It's time to get well had come, and it got well." "Mybe so," replied the other dubiously, "but don't you think it was a miracle it didn't get well before, or wait till later on?" The remark is one susceptible of wide application.—Catholic Universe, Cleveland, O., 1901.

St John Exhibition.

It is generally admitted that the success of any Exhibition very largely depends upon the class of amusements it offers. No matter how important and instructive its other departments may be, these cannot of themselves draw an attendance sufficient to prevent a debit balance on closing day. Then, if this be so, the success of the St. John N. B. Exhibition is already assured.

This year, the Association fixed no given limit on amusement expenditure. Fred G. Spencer was simply instructed to secure the best available; as a result, the very cream of show amusements were selected at the chief amusement centres in the United States. No such magnificent attractions have ever previously been offered in St. John. The following are a few of them:—The headliner is A. Gie's Lions, a show which, of all show successes—has drawn the largest crowds this season, and is now performing at Winnipeg Exhibition to crammed houses. A Gie is a typical Spanish beauty;—her lions are the largest and most magnificent in captivity.

As one of her entrancing feats, Adgie places her pretty head between the jaws of the largest lion who lightly closes his teeth upon her neck. Few people will be content with one visit to Adgie.

The eye of civilization is at present focused on Japan and her clever people; and the Yamamoto Brothers will demonstrate the type of men now pitted against Russia. The Yamamotos are strength, courage and dexterity combined. Their high wire and perch feats are widely divided from common-place performances of this kind of which most people are thoroughly tired. They do no feats done by others; and others attempt no feats done by them. They stand alone in their class.

A dog circus is always delightful. People always like to see Canine intelligence at its consummate development; and its limit cannot be realized until one has seen Sheddman's Circus of twenty pretty animals. The whole performance is wonderful, and very amusing. Even the most melancholy of men is guaranteed a hearty laugh at Denton's Musical Clowns. They are admittedly the funniest men on the stage.

Then comes La Balls, the greatest living juggler and hoop roller, who is now winning fresh successes in New York. His performance is like an infectious epidemic,—every one tries his tricks after seeing them; and there is an unprecedented demand for hoops wherever he performs.

Another splendid feature will be the American Vitagraph Moving Pictures. This concern is the largest manufacturer of films in the world, and, as a result, they carry the largest, latest and best selections of pictures. By special arrangement, a magnificent series of battle scenes is now being taken at the front in the Far East, to be retained exclusively for the St. John Exhibition.

The fireworks this year will be on a very generous scale. Never before has anything like so expensive and elaborate a display been arranged for a St. John Exhibition.

Five bands—among them, the best military band on the Continent—have been engaged to contribute daily concerts. The advent of the English Meister Glee Club—King Edward's Favorites—will be hailed with delight by every lover of good music. Altogether St. John Exhibition, 17th to 25th September, will go up several big notches this year.

Rev. Bernard Vaughan is continuing his outdoor preaching in London. There is a good attendance, many of those present following closely the simple addresses and joining in the singing of the hymns.

It is now exactly a year since the Sisters expelled from France founded the Convent of Our Lady of Grace at Charlottetown, England. In that time rapid progress has been made. When the chaplain of the convent, Rev. Fr. Brediot, first said Mass in the chapel, two members of the public assisted, while now the average attendance on Sunday morning is one hundred and seventy. The Sisters have also started a day school for Catholic children of the neighborhood.

The annual congress of the English branch of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul met in Liverpool on the patronal feast. Archbishop Baines, of Westminster; Bishop Whitehead, of Liverpool; Bishop Allen, of St. Albans; Mgrs. Carr and Nugent and many priests were present, also 650 delegates, among them many prominent laymen, including the Marquis of Ripon, Count de Torre Diaz and Hon. A. Wilton K. S. G., L. C., of Cape Colony.

In the July issue of the "Lamp," a High Church journal, there is an interesting communication from Japan. The writer, Rev. Arthur Lloyd, M. A. says:

"On the second Sunday after Easter, after attending the celebration at St. Andrew's Church, I went, according to my custom, to the Roman Catholic church at Kasumi Oho Azaba, for the 9.30 Mass.

"I arrived at the church a few minutes before the time, and, going in, found a Japanese priest at the altar, finishing a Mass. I was a little surprised at this. There are not many Japanese priests connected with the Roman missions in this part of the country. The rule is that no Japanese is admitted to holy orders in the Roman Church unless he is a Christian of the third generation, so that the whole of his life may have been spent in Christian surroundings. There is good reason for this discipline. We are warned against putting authority into the hands of neophytes, and the yoke of sacerdotal celibacy is one which cannot, without great danger, be laid on the shoulders of new converts.

"I concluded, therefore, that the priest must come from the South, where there are large communities of Catholic Christians, who have borne the cross for nigh upon three centuries—men of true fidelity and patience.

"At the conclusion of his regular 9.30 Mass I wish to speak to the celebrant, Abbe Ligneul, who has been kindly reading some MSS. for me, and so went into the garden to speak to him. I did not find him; but I found a Japanese soldier walking about, whom I presently recognized as none other than the Japanese priest, the conclusion of whose Mass I had witnessed an hour before.

"The all-devoting military conscription had laid its hands on him, and he had been obliged to take off his cassock and don the uniform of his sovereign."

Admiral Lord Walter Kerr, who ceases in October to be Naval First Lord of the Admiralty, has been promoted to be an Admiral of the Fleet, "in recognition of the great value to the navy and the nation of his fifty years of naval service." The appointment and the appropriate words in which it is announced, synchronise fully with the visit of British blue-jackets to the Vatican. That gay and gallant demonstration, astonishing to Rome, has, perhaps, enlightened even the man in the street at home.

Born in 1839 a younger son of the seventh Marquis of Lothian, Lord Walter Kerr was twelve years old when his mother, an early adherent of the Anglican revival, was received into the Catholic Church. Her two daughters, and later her two younger sons, soon followed this devoted example. To enable a yet younger son, then a child of ten, to gratify his desire to be a child of the Church, Lady Lothian stole out of Newbattle Abbey early one winter morning to take him to Edinburgh to be received by Dr. Gillies, the Vicar-Apostolic. As they hurriedly crossed the park, they heard behind them the sound of footsteps—not of pursuers, as it turned out; but of her third son, Lord Ralph, who, having been apprised of the affair, was determined not to be left behind.

Lord Walter himself was away from home. He had entered the Navy at the age of thirteen, and was then in the Baltic, graduating, under the guns of the Russians, in the School of War; but while the Fleet was at home between the two Baltic expeditions of 1854 and 1855, he too resolved to be a Catholic. This decision, however, was come to only on the eve of the Fleet's leaving Spithead. There was just time for Dr. Grant, the Bishop of Southwark, to meet Lord Walter's ship, the Prince Regent, at Sheerness, and to give the neophyte his first Communion—and this despite the antagonism of a very Protestant uncle, who was at the time Flag-Captain at the Nore. Stirring times followed for the young sailor with Peel's Naval Brigade in that "great unending epic" (as Stevenson called it)—the Indian Mutiny. To Lord Walter's subsequent career the general press has done full justice this week. It is now thirty-one years since he married Lady Amabel, youngest daughter of the sixth Earl Cowper, herself a convert to the Church, with whose good works the Catholics of the present generation are familiar. In 1901 she added a son, her oldest, to the London Oratory, while her contributions to Catholic literature are too well known to need any detail mention.

Four Falls, N. B.

A little boy was going on a visit, and was told before going, by his mamma, not to ask for anything to eat, as he had been in the habit of teasing for something at every place he went to. He happened to call at his aunt's, and walked around the room a few times. At last he thought of a plan, and said: "Auntie, don't you think your cookies will get mouldy?"
