A Father's Fertile Scheme.

By RUTH CAMERON.

On a certain street in a town where I used to live one place, though no larger or more imposing stands out from all the rest. Strangers passing often stop to look at it. The townspeople are proud of it and point it out to their visitors. And yet the house itself is no more attractive than several others on that street. It is simply the tasteful arrangement of handsome trees and shrubs which gives the place its air of distinction. And thereby hangs a tale.

There are six children in that house. Twenty-two years ago when the first child was born there was nothing distinctive about the place, but on that day the proud father, wishing the commemorate the event in some extra-special way, went out into the woods, brought home two beautiful fir trees and planted them at the entrance to the little driveway. To-day they stand, two stately sentinels guarding the gate.

That was the beginning of a custom. On the day of each child's birth, and on the anniversary of each birthday, the father has planted at least one tree, shrub or plant as his birthday present to the child. The children have other gifts of course, but none in which they take more interest and pleasure than their father's.

Of course each tree or plant is known by the name of its owner. The sentinel firs are "Robert's firs." Mary, the next oldest, has a pair of apple trees, planted on the day of her birth, in which she can now climb. For the last four years they have borne splendid crops of apples which are looked on as Mary's particular property, although she shares them with the rest of the family.

The crimson rambler was planted on the baby's second birthday. The group of silver birches belongs to the little twelve-year-old daughter who, in her slim, girlish grace, rather reminds one of that exquisite tree. A cluster of purple and white lilacs, a wonderful Japanese maple and a beautiful wistaria are among the ornamental plantings which give the place its air of distinction. There is also a rose garden, a small but excellent fruit orchard, and a fine grape arbor which have come into being each in this way. A fertile patch of asparagus (presented by special request) belongs to the most practical of the brood and helps to supply him with pocket money.

Each child is supposed to take care of his own plants, and a yearly reward to the one who fulfills this duty the best helps stimulate their interest. The outdoor work is healthy for them, they have learned a good deal about gardening, the family has been drawn more closely together by this common interest, the appearance of the place has been greatly improved and its value correspondingly enhanced.

All this has been done on three-quarters of an acre of land, and with scarcely larger expenditure than any father in private circumstances makes on his children's gifts.

Don't you think that is a scheme good enough to be imitated?

Another Big Feature at the Nickel.

Selig Company's Sensation: "The Water Rat" in Two Reels.

Large audiences witnessed the fine show at the Nickel Theatre last evening and were greatly pleased with it; all who attended came away delighted with the performance. For the week-end show the manager has another treat in store for patrons. As will be noticed by advertisement elsewhere in this issue the Selig Company's great work entitled "The Water Rat" is to be presented. This is one of the finest and most sensational pictures ever given. It is in two reels and is of the most absorbing interest. The press abroad has spoken very favourably of it. It deals with a gentleman burglar, showing his house of mystery and how the detectives capture him. The scenery is magnificent throughout. Then there is a Pathé weekly showing the latest news items. Two bright comedies have been arranged. One is "Fishing Auntie Up" and the other "Clarence at the Theatre," and there is also a strong Italian dramatic film: "The Italian Bride."

Miss Gardner will repeat her popular song and the balance of the musical part of the entertainment will be of a high class. At the children's matinee to-morrow there will be extra pictures.

Monday, there will be a great Pathé play in two reels: "The Miner's Destiny." The Nickel is the popular resort these days, everyone likes to go there and enjoy themselves.

Her Busy Day.

The British matron used to sit in gracious dignity, and knit, and patch her husband's duds; with earnest zeal she used to make the bread, the doughnuts and the cake, and boil the luscious spuds. But times have changed; now, fiery-eyed, she lets her household duties slide, and treads her martial path; and in that land of good roast beef, the men are full of fear and grief, and shaken by her wrath. She says that she will have a vote, if she must set the steeple aloft, to drift to Kingdom Come; she burns cathedral, hall and school, and in her dainty reticule, she packs a deadly bomb. She pokes her once price parasol through costly paintings on the wall of this or that museum; she chooses statesmen here and there, until they plunge, in their despair into the sobbing sea. The king's afraid to take a walk, lest some bold matron's club may knock his crown across the street; he shivers on his royal throne, and in her bower, depressed, alone, Queen Mary has cold feet. The judges send the girls to jail, and take, in fines, their modest kate; but little does it help; from Lunnon Town to John o' Groat's, the women, for their precious votes, kyoodle, shriek and yell. So let us glad and thankful be that in this country of the free, the women are more wise; in gentlemanly style they fight, that they may gain their sacred right, the ballot, bless their eyes!

It has Ended 60,000,000 Corns

This little Blue-jay is removing a million corns a month.

It is doing that for hundreds of thousands who used to doctor corns in old ways. And every one of those legions of people would gladly tell you this:

That Blue-jay stops pain instantly. That the corn comes out in 48 hours without any pain or soreness.

That Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. And from that instant one forgets the corn.

That the corns never come back. New ones may come, but the old don't reappear.

Think of that, you who pare corns, you who use old-time methods. A famous chemist, in the one right way, has solved the whole corn problem. And that way—Blue-jay—is at every drug store waiting for your use.

Don't you think it time you tried it—now that sixty million ended corns owe their fate to Blue-jay?

Obituary.

On the 28th ultimo there passed peacefully away at Grand Falls, a bright and cheerful girl in the person of Miss Katie Bruce. She was a domestic with Mr. Richard Maloney for the last three years and her death came unexpectedly. Her illness was of short duration being alling only three short weeks. She was attended by Drs. Chamberlain and Scott of that place who did everything possible for her but without effect and two days previous to her death no hopes were entertained for her recovery. Father Finn, parish priest of that place attended her in her last moments and gave her the rites of her Holy Church. Her funeral took place from Mr. Maloney's residence on the 31st and was largely attended. Her body was taken to the railway station thence to her late home Iona, P. B. Numerous wreaths adorned her coffin placed there by loving hands of her many friends. She will be largely missed by her many loving associates, for those who knew her loved her many friends. She will be greatly who extends to her parents and friends sincerest sympathy.

Dark be the clay above her,
Fried in many ways;
None knew her but to love her,
None knew her but to praise.
