It is not how the boy begins the counts, but how he will end. Hard to Work to Live and Learn

The boy who begins his life in a home of luxury is certainly blessed, but he is sure of only one thing, and that is the advantages that wealth offers him.

If he sees fit to properly make use of these advantages there is no reason why he should not give a good account of himself in after years.
It is the boy who has to fight his way from obscurity into fame who is the ideal man. Premier Painleve applied from the very beginning. He had work and work hard, to live and lear This he did. His progress was retar ed because of many reasons, but I never allowed discouragement to det
