"I believe you were there yourself, Mr. Orme," said she, rising to adjourn to the drawing-room. "I believe you were the footman that did it, and had disguised yourself for the purpose, as the gallants about the French court used to do in Louis Quatorze's time. Fancy being forbidden to speak to a man on peril of your life, and his marching up to you with the tea-tray, or bringing you the vegetables at dinner. Ah, those were days. People never do such things now. There are no devoted lovers in the nine-teenth century."

There are no devoted lovers in the nine-teenth century."
"Don't be too sure of that, Mrs. Mont-pellier. Why did Holyhead stay so late, except to put you into your carriage? You see, I know that, too."
"Don't be too absurd. Talking of car-riages, will you drive down with me to-day to Kew Gardens? Much better for you than that odious Richmond party. The Ringdoves are coming. They both like you so much; and I must have a fourth, for they are still so taken up with each other. I wonder if it will last? We'll hear the band play, and drive back again to a quiet dinner here; last? We'll near the band play drive back again to a quiet dinner here; then we shall be all quite fresh for Lady Clearwell's. By-the-bye, did you go to the morning concert yesterday? I hear it was rather good. Tell me all about it was rather good. Tell me all about it."

Gilbert was intensely provoked. Do what he could, the color rose to his face as if he had been a schoolboy. Though he shifted his position and got into another chair, he did not do it well, and he felt that Mrs. Montpellier could not but remark his confusion. Luckily, just then, other visitors were announced, and he took his leave, but not till she had shot another of those sharp, inquiring glances of hers at him. When he got into the street he remembered that he had not replied to her good-natured offer of a seat in her carriage. He who was generally so composed and indolent and imperturbable—what had come over him?

generally so composed and indolent and imperturbable—what had come over him? "There's something very queer about me today," thought Gilbert, as he turned once more into South Audley street. "If I didn't believe it's impossible, I should think I was getting nervous. This sort of thing won't do at all. Hang it, I'll jump into a hansom and go and see I'll jump into a hansom, and go and see

CHAPTER IX.

There are some men who seem to be consulted instinctively by everyone in a difficulty. Which of us but has a friend somewhere to whom he flies at a moment's notice when he finds himself in a dilemma, whose opinions he asks eagerly, to whose maxims he listens with respectful deference, for whose brotherly interest he certainly feels intensely grateful, and by whose advice he as certainly refuses to abide?

I have heard experienced counsel affirm that the great difficulty they have to contend with, in the defense of criminal cases, is the extreme unwillingness on the part of the prisoner to confess, even to be adviser. "The truth the whole the part of the prisoner to contest, even to his adviser, "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." There is a suppressio veri somewhere in the unbosoming of even the most candid of culprits, and on this unfortfied point the whole defense is apt to break down, "I could have got him off, if I'd been quite sure he did it," says the astute Baltharers, "the if was wor," trust his counzar; "but if a man won't trust his counsel, he descrives to lose, and be hanged to him!"—which is, perhaps, after all, the result of his ill-advised insincerity. Now, on a point in which his own personal feelings were not concerned (for, on those in which they are, I hold no man to be better than a fool), I would have taken John Gordon's opinion as I would the lord chancellor's. He was one of the few men I have ever known who could calculate the eventual, not the improvides results of any given measure mediate, results of any given measure. I can find hundreds who will demonstrate clearly that if I pull the trigger the piece will go off; but I could number on my fingers those whose far-sightedness can hazard an opinion as to whether the cartridge will reach the pigeon at which it is aimed or fall short on the breast it is aimed or fall short on the breast of the inglorious crow. John Gordon, like a fine rider across a country, could see his way, so to speak, into the far distance, field by field. I would have been a very queer obstacle that turned him from it when once he had taken his

His whole career had hitherto been one of uncompromising determination. He was well born-indeed, a distant connection of Lady Olivia's-well bred and well educated; but he was a second son.
These encumbrances may think themseives fortunate in succeeding to a portion at all, more fortunate still if it is tion at an, more fortunate stin in it is ever paid up. John Gordon's brother had five thousand a year—John Gordon himself had five thousand pounds. He inherited, though, from his mother, a legacy worth five times that amount— an iron constitution, which nothing seem-ed able to impair, and a strength of will rarely equaled, at least in his own sexed able to impair, and a strength of will rarely equaled, at least in his own sex. An offshoot from the filustrious stock to which Lady Olivia belonged, the late Mrs. Gordon possessed, in common with her family, a noble obstinacy, which, while it degenerated in the male scions into pig-headedness and stupidity, fortified the females into rulers of absolute and irresponsible authority. This quality had descended to her son, modified, as became his sex, into determination in that course which his reason told him was the most judicious, John owed all the success he ever had in life.

Most young men of the upper class with

Most young men of the upper class wit Most young men of the upper class with the thousand pounds seem to think is inadequate a provision is hardly worth taking care of, and fritter the principal away in the pursuit of pleasure, with touching resignation and an implicit reliance on Destiny which would do credit to a Moslem. Some more adventurous spirits sink their capital in the purchast of complete the control of th to a Moslem. Some more adventurous spirits sink their capital in the purchase of commissions in the army—a glorious profession, doubtless, but not lucrative. Bellona's noblest prizes will make their winner illustrious certainly, but not independent; and a clean-swept orderly-room is a poor substitute to a middleaged man for the happiness of a home. To be sure, there is the off-chance of a settlement by a violent death, but this can scarčely be placed to the credit side of the account. Few think of making the five thousand into ten thousand; but of these few was John Gordon. At eighteen he thought the matter over in this wise: "What would I wish to be at forty? Certainly at that age one begins to get an old fellow; but I doubt if even then one is quite past all the pleasures of life. I see men at forty as active, as full of energy, as hopeful, as enthusiastic, almost as great fools, as at twenty. I am not sure but that they enjoy the world more than their juniors. Their place is marked out, their positions established and perhaps it is pleasant also to look back." John had seen but little from the latter point of view, and knew as yet nothing of a "sorrow" ergwn of serrow." and perhaps it is pleasant also to look back." John had seen but little from the latter point of view, and knew as yet nothing of a "sorrow's erown of sorrow." "Yes, it is not such a worn-out age, after all. What would I like to be at forty? I should like to be independent, to have influence, a certain station and recognized position in society. Perhaps I might wish to marry; certainly, I should want a home. How are these things to be obtained? I want them, therefore I will have them. I have youth, I feel; I have energy and endurance, I know. I have energy and endurance, I know. I have never been beaten yet in the cricket-ground or the schoolroom; why should I not conquer in the real world outside? Had I lived in the dark ages, I should have taken care to have a goof horse under me, a good sword by my side as many men-at-arms as I could command at my back. In those days such were the accessories which wrested power and independence and the enjoyments of life. What constitutes power now? What is the talisman that obtains for a man respect, regard, friendship, applause and admiration? Is it genius?—no; courage?—no; benevolence and philanthropy?—no. I have already seen men with each and all of these qualities go irremediably to the wall. What is it, then?—money! Am all of these qualities go irremediably to the wall. What is it, then?—money! Am I satisfied of this—thoroughly. Money, then, I want, and money I will have. How am I to get it? I have two-andtwenty years before me, and five thou-sand down the day I come of age. I will go into business at once. What have I to do with aristocratic prejudices? and I to do with aristocratic prejudices? and what need I care for the sneers of my smart friends? Will the blood they talk about so much provide me with a fine coat, as it does a thoroughbred horse? Of what use is an escutcheon without a hall to hang it up in? I will go into business tomorrow. If I live to see my fortieth birthday, it shall not be my fault if I am in a worse position than my elder brother."

A prettier pitching contest than that between McLaughlin and Phillips has seldom, if ever, been seen at Spring-bank Park. McClarys started the match with bright prospects, hav-ing up till the sixth inning four runs to their opponents' 1, but received their death-blow in the seventh, when five runs were made by the brewers. B. Hammond's good batting won him much favorable comment, as did that of Peacock, who had three opportune-ly-made hits chalked up against Mo-

BENNETS 9, RIVERSIDES 7. A large crowd witnessed the game on Saturday afternoon between Bennet nine and the Riversides at the club grounds on Rectory street. The game was a good one, the Bennet team winning by a score of 9 to 7. Early, the pitcher of the Bennet club, was in the box for the second time in one afternoon, he having pitched the first game at Tecumseh Park in the afternoon, with Taylor catching. The features of the game were a home run hit by G. R. Penwarden and a one-hand catch by Allen, of the Riversides. Mr. C. G. Moorhead, as umpire, gave entire satisfaction. Score: Bennets. A.B. R. B.H. CRICKET.

BARRACKS TEAM DEEATED. Weakened by the absence of some of best players, the Wolseley Barracks cricket team met defeat at Woodstock on Saturday, by the narrow margin of ten runs. The Barracks men took only ten men with them, and were compelled to accept the services of Mr. Sykes, of Woodstock. The game was decided on the first inning, and was witnessed by a large number of specbler for the Barracks. Dr. Archie Be-cher made a great drive for seven runs for the Barracks in the first inning. The crease was not in good shape, being rather hard and uneven, and despite the best efforts of the bowlers, the ball at times proved most erratic. Woodstock club entertained the visiting team at the Buckingham Hotel, and it is needless to say that they were well looked after. The score: Wolseley Barracks-First inning-

HAROLD H. TRAVELS FAST. Detroit, June 30.—There were doings at the Windsor and Grosse Pointe tracks Saturday. At Windsor, Harold H. worked a mile in 2:081/2. Shortly after he was again sent around the circle and reeled off the mile in 2:071/2. The half of the second mile was done in 1:021/2 and the last quarter in 30 seconds. At Grosse Pointe, Lord Derby is reported to have done a mile in better than 2:08. The trotter is standing to his work like a major and Spear is pointing him well for the big events. Whitney and Duryea purchased Irish Lad from J. E. Madden, June 20, and paid, it was rumored, $15,000 for him. The colt has been a very profitable one for them, as he has won three straight races, including Saturday's
