TODAY'S VOTE IN MONTREAL The good name of the city of Montreal is staked upon today's vote of her citizens. All the forces of reform are behind the movement for the creation of a board of control. The rejection of this bylaw would be a triumph for the gr after element, and would depraved than even New York and Philadelphia, where the reformers at least routed the enemy for a season. The Cannon commission has just ing brilliant ones.

finished taking evidence which has shamed every Montrealer with a spark of conscience or civic pride. Prominent French-Canadians bave warmly resented the attempt of some of the corruptionists to drag in the race cry, and have been foremost in the fight for a change of system which would wipe out the old gang. Among these champions of good government, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux and Mr. Bourassa have been the most conspicuous. They have urged their compatriots by voice and pen to wipe out the st gma upon the city, and upon the French-Canadian people. Every local newspaper, excepting one controlled by a city hall manipulator, is on the right side. Montreal has the chance to redeem herself today. Will she prove worthy of her proud eminence as the Canadian me-

Total $1,500,000,000 This enormous sum is merely the expenditure for army and navy appropriations in time of peace, and represents about 40 per cent of all taxes paid. When will the world wake up and shake off the hypnotic spell of the armament lobbyist? The great nations are today treading the peaceful paths of industry. Why should they go about armed to the teeth, regarding one another as footpads? The amount spent upon armaments would pour a fertilize stream through all the channels of trade, or if wisely, spent upon schemes of social amelioration, would remove a mass of poverty and human misery. Some day the many will refuse to bear the burden longer to play the game of the few.

BRITISH AND RUSSIAN CO-OPERATION.

According to a white book on Persia recently issued by the British foreign office, the terms of the Anglo-Russian convention of 1907 have thus far been faithfully carried out by the parties to it. The convention divides Persia into a northern and a southern sphere of interest, Russia being given charge of the former, and Great Britain of the latter, and each contracting party assuring the other of co-operation as regards the whole of the country. Since the conclusion of the convention has occurred the deposition of Shah Mahommed Ali without intervention, although Russia had previously supported the deposed ruler. In the early part of the present year, however, Russia sent troops into the country on the pretext of protecting the foreign consulates, and they still remain there. In the white book the statement is made that Sir Edward Grey exacted an official assurance from M. Isvolsky in April last, that the armed intervention would be temporary and not exceed the precise limits of the task which had necessitated it. Notwithstanding this assurance the fear is expressed by some English newspapers that Russia has no intention of withdrawing her troops. The internal affairs of Persia meanwhile are in a state of chaos, the new government being powerless, and neither of the superintending powers apparently being desirous of Interferring. The result is that both foreign and native interests suffer, and recently the London Times declared that the question of taking measures to GREAT TOURIST ROUTE deal with the disorder in the south, where British trade is paralyzed and travel almost impossible, cannot be deferred indefinitely. With an empty treasury the Persian Government cannot but remain impotent, and it would not be surprising if the two European powers concerned were eventually compelled to take in hand the settlement of the country's domestic affairs. Meanwhile, in spite of talk in the English press of Russian duplicity, the British foreign office appears satkeeping faith as regards Persia. The Huntingdon Gleaner declares for free trade with Great Britain. Per-25 haps it is only teasing the Canadian Huge Engineering Feats Mark Railway in Western Chile After Long Toil.

London, Sept. 18.-The Transandine Railway, now under construction in the western part of Chile, is the connecting link in the first railroad to join the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans across South America, and is the remaining uncompleted section between Buenos Ayres, the capital of Argentine Republic, and Valparaiso, the chief port of Chile, says the Engineering Record. The entire line connecting these cities is to be 888 miles long and has been under way, with interruptions from a variety of causes, since 1880, and the final section, consisting of the heavy mountainous porthe Chilean side of the international boundary line, will probably be completed next year. This section has been by far the most difficult part of the line and progressed very slowly until 1904, since which time it has gone forward rapidly until the sole re-Government began to show fight, the maining difficulty of great size is the long summit tunnel. The credit for the excellent showing during the latter period, in the face of great difficulties, is due to the house of W. R. Grace & Co. which, through its London representatives, Grace Bros. & Co., Limited, took over the property and rights of the former concession 1901, and contracted with the Chilean the remainder of the line in 1904. The onstruction cost, on which the Government guarantee is based, is $6,500,-

The Connecting Link, The importance of this final connecting link can be appreciated from the fact that it will reduce the time between Buenos Ayres and Valparaiso to about 29 hours, whereas the trip by steamer via the Strait of Magellan requires ten days. It will also shorten the route from Europe and the east coast of South America to Australia and Japan by about 1,000 miles, and

Even in its incomplete condition, during which passengers are transported by stage between the temporary termini on either side of the boun dary line, the traffic in 1907 amounted to 244,000 passengers. The possibility was taken until 1873, when a concession was granted by the Argentine Government for the eastern end of the line. Not until seven years later, however, was any actual work performed, and then the Government built the Will Crooks, the English Labor Argentine Great Western Railway from Villa Mercedes to Mendoza, which tance of 428 miles, by John and Mat-thew Clark. These resulted in the decision to limit the adhesion grades to a maximum of 21/2 per cent, the track grades to a maximum of 8 per cent, and the curves to a radius 150 meters. The data gathered and the lines proposed were submitted to the Chilean Government for approval, which was obtained in October, 1904, and construction work was started
