Mr. Suter, who has recently been ransomed from the Greek brigands, tells an interesting story of his experiences after his wife was sent to Salonica to secure the money for his release. The brigands consisted of Ottoman Greeks, Helenes, and Christian Albanians, and several of them were deserters from the Greek army. They were divided into two bands, between which there was constant discord, and in their quarrels their captive's life was frequently in danger. Mr. Suter and his captors slept on leaves on the ground, and when released Mr. Suter was covered with sores and vermin. When the brigands were not absent on foraging expeditions they passed most of their time in singing, cancing, drinking, card-playing, and telling, stories of murders and other villanous capiots. Notwithstanding their shameless life and blasphemous language, they were, very superstitious and strict in their religious observances. They fusted during Leadening, burning incense, chanting hymnes, and smiting each other with kisses, which they also bestowed upon their captive.

Female Bicyclists.

If the rising generation of New York girls do not make healthy women, it will not be for the lack of open-air exercise. I know children who spend eight hours every day in the street or park. Roller skates have had a run, and are being discarded. Velocipedes promise to afford the general summer diversion. They are generally three-wheeled, yet quite young children learn the balance of the bicycle. At Bay Ridge suburb, I lately saw six little girls racing away on bicycles like grown experts. I also saw several girls of full growth on two wheels. They were astride the vehicles, man fashion, and one was riding a machine so tall that her legs were stretched to the utmost in reaching the pedals. The place was secluded, and they were not abashed by the scrutiny of one of their own sex. They had been training in expectation of indulging freely in the sport at a retired White. Mountain resort during the summer, and there is some probability that their example will be extensively followed by fashionable women. They were very loose trousers of hin fiannel, plaited at the waist and ankles, not also the probability that their example being almost as full as though the garment were not bifurcated. There seems to be no reason why a modest woman shouldn't ride the bicycle, and ride it astraddle. Female Bicyclists.

A Newspaper Office Affort.

The latest "new departure" in newspaper enterprise is reported from New Orleans, La. The Democrat of that city has fitted up a branch office on a barge, which,
having been towed up the Mississippi river to Memphis, is now floating down to New Orleans again, stopping at all points of interest on the way to gather information concerning the country along the river and for some distance back into the interior. The barge is sixty feet long, with twelve feet width of beam. Its interior accommodations comprise business, editorial, and job offices, composing and press-rooms,
sleeping apartments, dining-room, kitchen,
and stables for the horse used in making land trips back from the river. It is practically a fully equipped newspaper establishment affoat.

A Thieving Goddess.

The tutelary goddess, Benton, recently appeared to a rich farmer of Hataya, Japan, and informed him that she needed the use of his go-down for three days and as many nights, a service for which she would recompense him liberally by extending her special protection to his household. The go-down contained a considerable quantity of goods, but as the goddess had desired that these should not be removed lest public attention light be attracted, they were merely packed away in one end of the building, while the other was furnished with everything rich or sumptuous the yeoman could provide himself or borrow from his neighbors. According to his divine visitor's instructions, the farmer and family kept their doors and windows religiously closed, and did not venture near the go-down till the three days had expired, when they found that the goddess, having accomplished her earthly mission, had returned to the skies, taking $1,800 worth of property with her. A Thieving Goddess.

The Boston Preacher in Texas.

While in Texas, says Eli Perkins in the Chicago Tribune, we stopped at a ranch on the banks of the San Antonio river, about a mile from San Antonio, and right in the midst of these ruined Spanish cathedrals midst of these ruined Spanish cathedrals and irrigating candls. Around the ranch were green fields of corn breast high, some dogs good enough for the Westchester dog show, and the handsomest horses I ever saw. The proprietor came out dressedsin baggy brown linen pantalogus, bed-ticking suspenders, and a Yankee chip-hat, turned up behind like Joshua Whitcomb's. He was a very handsome man—tall, muscular, with a manly brow, features fit for a model, and a rich, full voice, which spoke pure English. I thought at once, "What a handsome man! How did you come down here on a ranch?"

"my two men are sick, and I am working like a slave myself, Yesterday I dug out that arrigating ditch, and I've drawn one hundred and seventy one loads of manure this spring myself, and spread it on the land, too. I believe I can demonstrate that the best tobacco land in the world is That the best tobacco land in the world is The sas. You won't believe it—you wou'dn't believe a man would be such a fool—but I tell you, sir, I am working here for an idea. I want to prove that crops can be raised here, and splendid crops, too, without irrigation. Come and she the horses," he said, leading the way behind the house.

"They are the first in Texas," said my friend. "That mare can go in 2.20, and either of these stallions is worth $8000."

Dear Sir: I desire to acknowledge with my heartiest thanks the handsome treatment I have received from your noble life Company, the AUNA of Hartford, Conn. The returns for my annual payments received from you last year, and this, on the maturity of my two endowment policies, have more than met my expectations. You have said me a good interest for all the moneys I have put into your hands; you kept my life insured for the ten years to the full amount of the policies; and now, when I need it most, you pay me the full sum in a lump. I have never made any investment that pleased me more.

REV. JOSEPH E. KING.

Dear Sir: I have this day received payment of my ten-year endowment policy which I took out in the AUNA. On this policy I paid to the company investment of 9632.45. Another policy of $902.00 falling due at the same time, have taken out another policy for $5,000,00. Yours with my investment that have taken out another policy for $5,000,00. Dear Sir: In May 1886, I insured with your company on a fifteen year endowment plan. I have to-day the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of a check for $2,537,07 in payment of my policy. I have paid in to the company, $2,217,27, and received in return the amount stated above. In addition to having had insurance for the last fifteen years, I have received as interest on my investment $319,80, which satisfies me that my money has been well expended.
