Sir. — Perhaps there is no way in which we can see more clearly the rectitude or obliquity of principles than by running them out to extremes. Work out thus the principle on which the custom house censorship of literature is based, and we find it leads directly to "paternal government," household "inquisition," and a union of church and state in a full-armed hierarchy similar to that of the darkened middle ages church and state in a full-armed hierarchy similar to that of the darkened middle ages real and as an aid to proselytism. There is neither an intelligent Protestant nor Catholic in this city probably who could conscientiously urge the application of the principle involved so far. The argument used is intended only to be illustrative of the principle. In this new age of enlightenment on tended only to be illustrative of the principle. In this new age of enlightenment on which we have entered all sectarians feel instinctively that neither reason nor faith can be forced, but must be led by superior or more enlightened reason or faith. Among them were the governors of New York, Maryland, Virginia, Michigan, Delaware, North Carolina, Tennessee, Rhode Island and Vermont, Vice-President David Davis, Alex. H. Stuart of Virginia, George F. Hoar, Rev. J. P. Newman, Senator Bayard and many others. A few minutes before the president arrived Gen. Hancock paid his respects to the governor of Virginia. He was heartily received. At 12.40 the president, accompanied by Secretaries Lincoln, Hunt and James, was escorted to the stand amid the cheers of the crowd. The ceremonies James, was escorted to the stand amid the cheers of the crowd. The ceremonies were opened with prayer by Rev. Robert Nelson, a grandson of Governor Nelson, who commanded the Virginia military at Yorktown. Governor Halliday of Virginia then delivered an address of welcome. The masonic procession, under the direction of the grand master, and including visiting brethren, thenproceeded to the monument site and laid the corner stone. Judge Wellford of Virginia, masonic orator, then made an eloquent address, at the conclusion of which the ceremonies ended. In the evening a grand display of fireworks was made and the warships in the harbor were beautifully illuminated.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF THE VES-TRY LAST NIGHT. The Church Wardens Cannot Resign-And Resolve to do the Best They Can Under the Circumstances-The Rev. Mr. Pearson Defines A meeting of the vestry of Trinity church was held last night for the purpose of receiving the report of the committee appointed to examine the legal aspect of the churchwardens resignation. The Rev. John Pearson occupied the chair. After some delay the report was present-ent of the finances of the to a statement of the linances of the church by which it appeared that there was a deficit of $300, and the curate fund had decreased from $700 to $100. If the law compelled them he supposed they could hold office by deputy as suggested, but they certainly of debt until they had paid off all they owed. Mr. Taylor said if the law said they must difficulties with regard to funds, and he did not think he and his colleagues should be subjected to a labor which was never con subjected to a labor which was never con-templated—that of raising money under great difficulties from a congregation who did not seem disposed to give it. He thought it was the duty of the congretion if they continued in office to supply them with money to carry on the necessities of the church. He was not going to run the church on credit, and they must have the money in hand before incurring any expenditure. After a long discussion the churchwardens consented to act personally.

Mr. Pearson then asked leave to speak. He thought the time had come for him to say a few words. It was absurd for him to pretend not to know that a great deal of what had been said that night, as to the decrease in the funds of the church had been directed at him. He would say in reference to that, that the falling off was reference to that, that the falling off was during the summer, before the responsibility, a responsibility he had never sought for, had been thrown on his shoulders. Referring to the commencement of his connection with the parish, he said he had been approached by the rector more than six and a half years ago through the intervention of friends of both parties, and had been invited to come here. Letters had passed between them in which the rector said he was anxious that nothing should be done to excite ill feeling and continue the ruin which he said had begun in the church and added, "I hope you have ve gone the church and added. "I hope you have which Mr. Pearson had replied that he had no sympathy with ritualism, that his principles were that of the church of England, and that above all he would never be a party to introducing ceremonies belonging to the church of Rome. On that understanding he had come to this parish. He had further been told that the parish had been wrecked and ruined by the conduct of certain young men in connection with the

Since his coming he had never ceased privately to protest against never ceased privately to protest against changes made in one direction, which changes it had been his lot to have to undo. While protesting privately he had held his peace and up to a few months ago there was only one person in the parish who knew of it from him (the speaker).
