"I have just received your very valuable and beautifully illustrated work on the noxious insects. Pray accept my hearty thanks for this handsome volume, which forms a most welcome addition to my natural history library."—Marquis of Lorne, Governor General of Canada.

"Cannot fail to prove of interest to the fruit-growing community; and Mr. Saunders has shewn himself well fitted for the task of preparing such a book."—Hon. Geo. B. Loring, United States Commissioner of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

"An able entomologist, an experienced agriculturist, and a good chemist, Mr. Saunders unites in himself the necessary qualifications to write an excellent book upon 'Insects Injurious to Fruits,' and he has fully accomplished this task. His book is simply the best work extant upon the subject. Nothing so readable, so practical, and so beautifully printed and illustrated has been issued by the press. The book is a credit to all concerned."—Prof. A. R. Grote, of New Brighton, N. Y.

"I am very much pleased with the work, which is a timely and useful, and by far the best thing on its subject in English with which I am acquainted."—Prof. S. A. Forbes, State Entomologist of Illinois.

"I think the book is not only excellent, but eminently practical."—Prof. H. A. Hagen, Cambridge, Mass.

"This is the best book I know, and an excellent one on the subject treated."—Prof. W. J. Beal, Lansing, Michigan.

"Supplies a want greatly felt by intelligent fruit-growers. It will be a valuable addition to the library of every agriculturist."—Prof. John L. Lecante, Philadelphia, Pa.

"It is a magnificent work, superbly published, and its author's reputation as an entomologist and as a practical fruit-grower is a sufficient guarantee of the accuracy and utility of its contents."—C. V. Riley, Chief U. S. Entomological Commission, Washington, D. C.

"I believe it is the best thing that has appeared since 'Harris's Insects.' I shall advise all fruit-growers to obtain it."—Prof. C. H. Fernald, Orono, Me.

"I consider your book the most practical and best arranged work on orchard insects that has been written."—Chas. W. Garfield, Secretary Michigan Horticultural Society, Grand Rapids.

"A most useful book. It is just what is needed, comprising as it does almost everything that is known on the subject down to the present day, and in a concise and handy form for constant reference."—Marshall P. Wilder, President American Pomological Society.

"Distinguished as the author is, as an entomologist and as a horticulturist, and known as a careful and accurate writer, he has succeeded in making the volume an authoritative one. Its preparation could not have been undertaken by one better qualified for the task. Just the needed information is tersely and simply given, and in no other volume is it to be found. It cannot fail of contributing largely to the very important and growing interest of fruit-culture in our country."—J. L. Lintner, State Entomologist, Albany, N. Y.
