well as through his books, Mr. Roche was well known and appreciated in Canada and in the University. His loss is very keenly felt here. May he rest in peace.

Exchanges.

We cannot help expressing our delight with the "lily" number of the Young Eagle. Each month we get a treat, while about the present one there is, as is proper, a delicate sweetness, freshness, and variety. "A House Party in Exchange Land," is very cleverly worked out. The Young Eagle, it seems, is a welcome visitor into the college sanctums throughout the length and breadth of the continent, and also to countries of Europe and to South Africa.

We failed to find a table of contents in the Nazareth Chimes. The quarterly is worth reading from cover to cover, but, just the same, we cant take a whole day off to do it.

The first number of the Vox Lycei, second volume, is on our table. We welcome this organ of a sister institution of our own city. Its prospectus is stated in a quotation from the Vox Lycei of nearly fiften years ago:—

"Nothing bordering on the vulgar will obtain entrance; slang will be carefully excluded. In regard to humor, which is by far the most dangerous department to manage, we are determined not to subvert the true literary standing of this paper to the outcome of rabid and senseless imaginations. Genuine humor, however, will be appreciated and will find a suitable place in our columns. We shall not be content merely to uphold the past reputation of the Vox, but our aim shall be to raise the standard of its literary worth. We appeal to the pride, the good sense, the generosity, and the genius of our school to uphold us in this resolve."
