

Recommendations in the final family enhance the conditions for successful evaluations. Four of these seek approval of principles for conducting evaluation, dealing with scope, use of evaluability assessments, appropriate methodology and involvement of program managers. The need for follow-up of results is pointed out as is the need for coordination with certain other groups.