

A reciprocal agreement was reached between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America on September 10, 1941, regarding the exchange of military personnel and the movement of military personnel between the two countries. The agreement provides that military personnel of one country may be permitted to travel in the territory of the other country for the purpose of military training, or for other reasons, provided that the personnel of the other country are permitted to travel in the territory of the first country for the same purposes. The agreement also provides that military personnel of one country may be permitted to travel in the territory of the other country for the purpose of military training, or for other reasons, provided that the personnel of the other country are permitted to travel in the territory of the first country for the same purposes. The agreement also provides that military personnel of one country may be permitted to travel in the territory of the other country for the purpose of military training, or for other reasons, provided that the personnel of the other country are permitted to travel in the territory of the first country for the same purposes.

Exchange of Military Personnel between Canada and the United States of America

On September 10, 1941, the Hon. J. A. Macdonald, Minister of External Affairs, on behalf of Canada, and the Hon. E. A. Tamm, Secretary of War, on behalf of the United States of America, signed a reciprocal agreement regarding the exchange of military personnel between the two countries. The agreement provides that military personnel of one country may be permitted to travel in the territory of the other country for the purpose of military training, or for other reasons, provided that the personnel of the other country are permitted to travel in the territory of the first country for the same purposes. The agreement also provides that military personnel of one country may be permitted to travel in the territory of the other country for the purpose of military training, or for other reasons, provided that the personnel of the other country are permitted to travel in the territory of the first country for the same purposes.

Exchange of Military Personnel between Canada and the United States of America

The Trade Agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America, signed at Ottawa on September 10, 1941, provides for the exchange of military personnel between the two countries. The agreement provides that military personnel of one country may be permitted to travel in the territory of the other country for the purpose of military training, or for other reasons, provided that the personnel of the other country are permitted to travel in the territory of the first country for the same purposes. The agreement also provides that military personnel of one country may be permitted to travel in the territory of the other country for the purpose of military training, or for other reasons, provided that the personnel of the other country are permitted to travel in the territory of the first country for the same purposes.