

ADDRESS IN REPLY TO THE SPEECH
FROM THE THRONE—Con.Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.

mention of this question in the Speech. The history of the naval question, 249. M. Monk in 1910, 250. In the House he declared he was against that motion, to which he declared to-day he adhered, 251. The Premier at the Constitutional Club and at Halifax; he soon changed his bearings, 252. He knew he would profit by the intense Nationalist agitation. His letter to Mr. Bourassa, 253. Mr. Borden hardly appeared in Quebec. The Nationalist denounced him, 256. Quotes Castell Hopkins. Quotes Mr. Monk in censure of Mr. Borden; a double-barrelled policy, 255. Quotes Mr. Albert Sevigny at Tingwick. The arguments used in Quebec, 256. Quotes Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Monk on Mr. Borden, 257. Mr. Nantel on Mr. Borden. Mr. Monk on the resolution, 258. In Quebec if the coalition won any seats, they won them by duplicity, demagoguery and sectionalism, 259. They have merged common hatreds, the common ambition, eye and principles too, 260. Mr. Hazen has passed judgment upon the Canadian naval plan. The Liberal policy, 261. Sir Wilfrid always advocated tolerance; his speech in 1877; the formation of a Catholic centre, 262. Promises to restore French and Separate schools in the Northwest made during the election. Danger of shattering the constitution, 263.

Loggie, W. S. (Northumberland, N.B.)—487.

Congratulations to the mover of the address, 487. Our foreign trade is quite as important to us as our home trade, 488. Unfortunate that reciprocity had not been voted on on its merits, 489. Takes issue with the Finance Minister on protection being the policy of both parties, 491. Liberals reduced the rate of taxation. Reciprocity did not in any way interfere with our home industries, 492. That policy has not been rejected by the Canadian people, 493. Canadian wheat; will soon have a very large surplus to export, 494. Statements made in the debate utterly without foundation; the press and the economic agreement, 495. The inspiration of the national standpoint came from the press led by the Montreal 'Star.' Quotes Mr. Cahan, 496. The people should know how the government stand on the great question of naval defence, 497.

Macdonald, E. M. (Pictou)—107.

Mr. Aikins has made a campaign speech, instead of addressing himself to the question, 107. The Cabinet has been made up of varied and conflicting forces. People who have been supplanted, 108. The men who sat in the last House know that it is not a Conservative Cabinet, 109. The people are quite aware that it was a matter of speculation if the Premier would have pluck enough to form a Cabinet from his own party, 110. The bounden duty of coalition cabinets to announce to the House the basis on which the agreement is arrived at, 111. Mr. Monk is going to tell us shortly all about this arrangement he made with the Premier, 112. The naval question, Mr. Monk and Mr. Foster differ, 113. Quotes Mr. Monk in February, 1910, 114. Quite sure Mr. Hazen did not know what Mr. Monk had said, or he would have hesitated in joining the Cabinet, 115. Mr. Monk declared that England was willing to hand us over to the United States in 1782, 116. Quotes Mr. Monk in November, 1910. Mr. Monk and Mr. Bourassa, 117. His amendment to the address last year. Mr. Nantel one of the unexpected things, 118. A second member of the Nationalist party denying that he is a Conservative, 119. The Nationalist theory is that Canada should not do anything for the Empire, 120. Does not know whether Mr. Monk mesmerized the Premier, or the Premier mesmerized Mr. Monk, 121. Thinks there are people behind Mr. Borden who may be satisfied for the moment, but will demand an explanation, 122. Mr. Monk denies the eloquent statement of the Conservative position given by Mr. Foster, 123. Mr. Burrell a strange selection, which supplanted Mr. Andrew Broder, 124. Wonders what kind of an arrangement Mr. Monk has with his desk mate, Mr. White, 125. It is the bounden duty of the Premier to give the House and country a full statement of how this coalition was brought about, 126. The House and the country await an announcement on this question, 127.

McKenzie, D. D. (Cape Breton North)—178.

Congratulations to the mover and seconder, 178. Reciprocity. No danger to the sacred tie that binds us to the Mother Country. Quotes Mr. Foster, 178. And Sir Charles Tupper, 179. Sir John Macdonald and Sir John Thompson, and Mr. Borden, 180. Mr. Hazen in 1891; and Mr. Sifton, 182. The Liberal party was not alone in favouring reciprocity. Reduction of representation, 183. Want either greater freedom or reciprocal trade. The fisheries, 184. Lost a great opportunity for our fishermen. Glad the development of St. Johns is going on, 185. Hopes they will continue to build breakwaters, &c.; and develop harbours, 186. Need of branch lines, glad the farmers are to be remembered, 187. Dog-fish reduction; $8 a ton added to the price, 188. Promise of a scientific tariff. Want one that suits the conditions. Labouring men under the Conservative regime, 189. Should be careful before launching on a new theory of Tariff Commission. The naval policy has been accepted, 190. The resolution; Quotes Mr. Nantel, as opposed to it, 191. The Premier took him into the Cabinet knowing he was a declared foe of any naval operations, 192. Quotes the Premier and Sir Edward Grey, 193-4-5. Quotes Mr. Monk, 196. Hon. Mr. Doherty in his speech on the
