

holder assessed in Middlesex at not less than £30, or elsewhere at not less than £20. City of London jurors must be occupiers of fixed property in the City, and have estate of the value of £100. Coroner's jurymen need only be householders.

The following persons are exempt from service—peers, members of Parliament, judges, practising lawyers and solicitors, managing clerks, officers of courts of justice and of the Houses of Parliament, practising members of the Royal College of Physicians, practising members of the Royal College of Surgeons, registered medical practitioners, apothecaries and chemists, army and navy officers while on full pay, the royal household, the masters, wardens, and brethren of the Trinity House, and members of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, servants of the Post Office and the Customs Service, and the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, and subordinate officers in the Inland Revenue, coroners, jailers, keepers of lunatic asylums, and ministers of religion. Further, any person who has been summoned to serve on a jury in any one year is exempt for the rest of the year from serving again, unless all the jurymen upon the list become similarly exempt. Persons summoned to and attending as jurymen at the High Court, Assizes, or Quarter Sessions are advised to apply for certificates of such attendance in order to make sure of obtaining future exemption, and also because in some counties the exemption is for a considerably longer period than one year. The application for a certificate should be made to the sheriff if the jury to which he was summoned was at the High Court or Assizes, and to the Clerk of the Peace if the jury was at Quarter Sessions. Persons serving in the Territorial Army are exempt from the duty of serving upon juries.

The names of the persons liable to serve upon juries are taken from a book known as 'The Juror's Book', and it is to the making up of this book that persons who are not liable to serve should pay attention. On the first three Sundays in
