

- spatial rather than temporal, 324;
systematic numeration, 325
- Object, as psychological term, 46 f.; Os.
of higher order, 316 ff.
- 'Objective,' its different meanings in psychology and epistemology, 18
- Obliviscence, 199, 215
- Onomatopoeia, creative, 292; in children, 292
- Organic sensations, 135, 136
- Pain, and action, 55, 277 f.; and attention, 262, 278
- Paramnesia, 208 n.
- PASCAL, and the psychological individual,
75 n.; on belief, 357
- PAULHAN, F., referred to, 309, 433 n., 467
- Perception, 81; meanings of, 141 f.; 'of the external world'—see Intuition, of things; as partly representative, 167 f.; internal, 371-8; of subjective activity, 373 ff.; of feeling, 375 f.
- Perseverance, 233, 235 f.
- Persona*, 369 n.
- Personality, 286 n.; multiple, 367; whr' it means, 464; implies stability and progression, 464 ff.; crises in the development of, 468 f.; 'conversion' as:
an instance of these, 468 ff.; ranks of,
466 ff.
- Phenomenon, 14
- Plasticity, 83, 99, 179; and psychogeny, 409
- Pleasure, and action, 55, 277; and attention, 262, 268; qualities of, 266 f.; the advance to 'higher' Ps., 267 ff.; and pain, their relation, 278 f.
- Plurality, 323 f.
- Positional signs, 150
- Possible, contrasted with actual, 161, 178, 179, 187
- Preference, 266 f.; analytic and synthetic, 402 f., 416
- Preperception, 186 f.
- Presentationism, 23 f., 70 f.; instances of,
36 f., 38 f., 381 f., 405 n., 411, 432, 456
- Presentations, meaning of, 46; twofold relation of Ps., 46; not subjective modification, 47, 61 n., 69; theory of, ch. iv;
primary, 170; secondary, 170
- 'Primary meaning,' 143
- Primary memory-image, 175
- Primum cognitum*, 200
- Projection, 103, 152 f., 164
- Protensity, 105, 107, 119, 213, 217
- Psychogeny, the subjective factor regarded structurally, 412 f., regarded func- tionally, 414-17; the objective factor,
(1) the natural environment, 418; (2)
the social, 418 f.
- Psychologist's fallacy, the, 19, 48, 82
- Psychology, definition of, ch. 1, 28; approximate description of, 1; three stages in its history—(a) that of Aristotle, 2-6; (b) that of Descartes, 6-12;
(c) the empirical, 12 ff.; P., objective and subjective, contrasted, 4; subjective, 7, 13; objective, 13; its standpoint, 17, 26 ff.; its distinction from epistemology, 18, 29-34; Analytic P., 26; 'Faculty' P., 57, 60 f., 70; 'As-sociationist' P., 23 n., 70, 179; Atomistic P. rejected, 49, 77, 78, 81, 143, 181, 183 f.; Rational, 379; general and special, 409 n.; 'differential,' 433 n.
- Psychophysical standpoint, of Aristotle, 2; preceded the psychological, 103, and yet presupposes it, 103 f.
- Psychoplasm, 412; inherited by the concrete individual, 425; elaborated by his ancestors, 426
- Psychosis*, 57
- Purposive action, and emotional expression, 52, 276 ff.
- Quotity, 323
- RAVAISSON, F., on genius, 450
- Reading, 238 ff.
- Realism, transcendental, 18; naïve, 30
- Reality, 161 f.; Locke and Berkeley on, 161 n.; degrees of, 382
- 'Reception' for 'sensation' proposed, 105
- Recognition, of impressions, 142 ff., 185
- 'Recurrent sensations,' 175
- Redintegration, 195
- Reduplications of memory-thread, 199;
as condition of ideational tissue, 200,
and of conflict of ideas, 202
- Reflex Action, 51; as secondarily automatic, 52
- Reflexion, as source of ideas, 14; as distinct from mere consciousness, 372 f.
- REHMKE, J., on traducianism, 424
- REID, THOS., on perception, 18; his censure of Locke, 61; his geometry of visibles, 155; on sentiments, 458 n.
- Reification, 142, 313 f.
- Relations, 318
- Relativity, 83 ff.; as formulated by Hobbes, 84; as differential theory of presentations, 84; as formulated by Wundt, 88;
as duality of experience, 89, 117; of the lower senses, 134 f.; of tactual and visual magnitudes, 153 f.; of feeling, 265
- Reminiscence, and recognition, 189, 207 f.; and imagination, 208
- Repetition and memorising, 222-7
- Re-presentation, 52, 168, 185, 186, 196,
197. See also Idea (ii)
- Residua, images as, 176 f., 179; of movements of attention, 215
- Restriction, 79, 414