STRENGTH SHOWN IN CORN MARKET

Bad Weather and Scarcity of Merchantable Grades Stiffen Quotations.

Chicago, March 9.—Owing to unfavorable weather and to the comparative scarcity of merchantable grades the corn market today gained in strength. Prices closed steady, %c net higher, with March $1.28 and May $1,27%. Out finished 4c up. In provisions, the outcome ranged from 2½c decline to a rise of 12½c.

As prevailing moisture and warmen of 12½c.

As prevailing moisture and warmth appeared likely to diminish the available supply of corn suited for commercial purposes, the relative smallness of the commercial purposes, the relative smallness of the state of such states. total amount of such grain shown by the government crop report, received a good deal of attention. Besides, traders were inclined to look for a more general domestic shipping call next week. In addition, receipts here showed some falling off in quantity, and there was further disquiet over rural complaints of a scarcity of cars. Undersuch circumstances, bears were handicapped thruout the day, and no reaction took place.

Week-end evening-up of trades strengthened oats. Receipts were meagre, and shorts seemd to have overexerted themselves, selling in anticipation of the government crop report.

Notice taken of the huge supply of cured meats in the west had a bearish influence on provisions. The effect, howotal amount of such grain shown
