THE KILLING OF SANDYS

Has Caused Excitement in Chatham. Where He Was Well Known.
Chatham, Ont., July 19.—The news of the shooting of Benjamin J. Sandys at St. Louis, Mo., threw this city into a state of excitement, owing to the fact that the murdered man was so well known here. The dead man was a son of the late Rev. Mr. Sandys, who for over 30 years was rector of Christ Church of this city. The mother still lives here at the homestead. Benjamin J. Sandys was born here and received his education in the Public School of Chatham. He was a general favorite among all who He was a general favorite among all who Collision Followed by Scrap. Gordon McDonald, 179 Gladstone-avenue, was arrested yesterday by Acing Detective Verney on a charge of feloniously wounding George Bennett, 39 Macdonell-avenue. It appears that on Saturday last Bennett was walking along Dundas-street when McDonald and a companion rode along behind him on bicycles, and they called on Bennett to get out of the way. This Bennett did, and in stepping to one side he collided with McDonald. A wordy war ensued, with the result that Bennett was assaulted.

Pare's Clever Contrivances for Hiding His Booty-Devices Which Seemed to Practically Defy Detection.

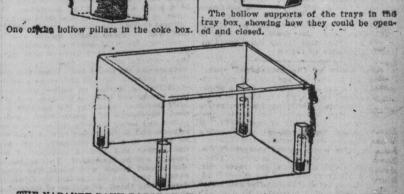

NAPANEE BANK ROBBERY.

The ingenious way in which Pare hid the i panee Bank robbery, is shown by accomanving cuts. One way was to provide a oal box with supports, half the height of the box in each corner. These supports were in the shape of square little pillars, and were hollow. At the bottom there was a plug cut smooth with the pillar's end, and this closed up a cavity, which extended throughout the little wooden p.lar, and in this bank bills were hidden. It was a chance of one out of a thousand that the receptacle was found.

The other way of biding the bills was by means of a chest which had three trays. These trays were supported by clamps. Fach of these clamps was hollow, and the front could be s'id up and down.

Sketches of the Men Who Have Been Instrumental in the Capture of the Suspects.

Napanee, July 19.—(Special.—Photographer Hulett is besieged by citizens who wish to get a glange at the detectives engaged on this case. Through his kindness The World has secured pictures of them all. The detective of to-day is not the bow-kinifed Deadwood Dick of the dime novel days. Put a detective and around and you would not pick him out for other than a preacher, a teacher or a professional man. They parade no insignia of office, and are not blusterers or swaggerers. They are models for all who desire to live according to the letter of the law. A point in favor of the present men in Napanee 4s that during their entire stay in town they have not been seen drinking anything stronger than seltzer. Yet all are possessed of deadly-looking pistols, that are carried in oil-cloth sheathes and show what would result if necessity called for vigorous action.

Reporters and Detectives.

Reporters and Detectives. Detective Wilkes, asked if it was not a natural graduation from the reportorial staff to the detective business, said "Yes, I suppose it is. But a detective's business is somewhat different from g reporter's. A reporter seeks for nubs of news, and is wet he is not required to publish his gleanings to the four corners of the earth. Everything, even the most trivial questions, are eagerly sought after by a detective, for they have generally an important bearing upon the fullest development of the case."

No Sweat-Box Business.

The detective was shown The World, in which was a statement that the police were using the sweat-box with the prisoners. He said, "You can say that I and all my colleagues most emphatically declare there has been absolutely nothing of the sweat-box system in operation in this matter. Nothing of the kind has been done. It is entirely foreign to our methods, besides being beneath us as gentlemen, which we hope we are. Our plan is to reason with a man, not to browbeat him. I have been in and out of the jail several times, but in all my conversations I tarked no different than I am talking now. We expect several important arrests yet to be made, hence we do not wish to be folled in our purpose. There is no sweat-box with us."

Chief of Police Healey. Chief of Police Healey.

M. J. Healey has been Chief of Police in Manchester, N.H., for about 20 years, and has the entire police force of the city under his sole control. He is a man of medium height, has brown hair, a light-brown mustache, a fair complexion and is of medium build. As a detective his chief point is his ability to get at the heart of a problem in an incredibly short space of time. He has a reputation that serves as a beacon-light to younger struggling members of the profession.

Good-Hearted Irishman. J. T. O'Dowd is one of M. J. Healey's assistants. He is a good-hearted, jovial Irishman, bubbling over with fun. His genial disposition helps him to make friends on sight, and across the line he is considered one of the most popular men in the profession. As a conversationalist he is brilliant, showing a well-stored mind and great literary, taste, His colleagues call him the Tennyson of the force, on account of his fondness for poetry.

streets, a terror to toughs. He is very, popular with all who want to have the towns recognized as a law-abiding community. He has his own peculiar views as to how the town should be run and carries them out without fear or favor. He has a great deal of Irish blood in his veins, and, while not frankly jovial, still enjoys a droil joke. Though he is partial to the Methodists, yet he does not allow that to interfere with the discharge of his duties.

His sanctum sanctorum is on the Market-square, in the centre of the town, at Police Headquarters. From this point he holds the order of the town under his eagle eye. A versatile man is the chief. He has been a farmer, a manufacturer, a court clerk, a milk inspector, a detective, an aldernan, and is now the guardian of one of the prettiest towns in Canada. He also stands guard over the various valuable discoveries lately made in the robbery case. But he is no gossip. The chief holds that the silent man never lies, hence he does not uns guardedly express his opinion upon the exciting topic of the bank robbery.

Women detest flies, and no wonder, for the destruction of many delicate house ornaments follows in the wake of these small pests. The best way to banish the fly and at the same time circulate fresh, cool air in our midst seems to be by use of the ceiling fan. G. T.
