Some years ago he went to Detroit, and up till a short time since was employed in that city as a Merchant's operator. He was 32 years of age, and son of Mrs. Porter who for many years kept a grocery store on the corner of Waterloo and Horton streets.

About half-past 9 last night Mr. William Rosser had his horse and rig stolen in East London. Mr. Rosser drove to the house of a friend, and an hour later he found that the outfit was missing. The missing horse is a dark bay one, with a white star on its forehead, and one white fetlock, while the buggy was an ordinary steel-tired bucky.

Rev. G. F. Sherwood Receives Degree at Huron College.

At the convocation held yesterday afternoon at Huron College, Rev. F. F. Sherwood, M. A., of Buffalo, was awarded the degree of B.D. by the senate of the college. The ceremony of conferring the degree was performed by Bishop Williams. The candidate was proposed by Provost James and Very Rev. Dean Davis.

The sermon preached by Mr. Sherwood was a very inspiring one, from the words "The Word of God liveth and abideth forever," found in the First Epistle of St. Peter. The sermon created a good impression.

Bishop Williams addressed the students of the college after conferring the degree. He commended the example of perseverance which Mr. Sherwood had set before the students, and said that the high standing he had attained should be an inspiration to them. He also paid a fitting tribute to the memory of the late Archbishop Bond, speaking in appreciative terms of his long life in the service of the Church of England.

The engine, tender, baggage and mail cars, together with the smoker, did not leave the track. Most of the injured are residents of this state.

FAMILY WERE SENT BACK TO ENGLAND

Were Suffering from Consumption and Were a Charge Upon the City.

The board of health met yesterday afternoon and transacted routine business.

Ald. Stevenson drew the attention of the board to the case of a boy who arrived in London some months ago, and who is suffering from tuberculosis. He claimed that the immigration authorities are very lax in their inspections. The board discussed the matter for some time, when it was allowed to drop, as it was reported that the family which adopted the lad are intending to take up market gardening, and will leave the city for the country shortly.

The consideration of Dr. Hutchinson's bill for attending a smallpox case in South London last winter, was laid over until the return of the mayor. The doctor was asked to attend the patient by her family physician, and as he is not compelled, as medical health officer, to do this class of work, he presented his bill. In the past he has always been paid for attending smallpox patients.

The chairman reported that the George family, which were afflicted by tuberculosis, have been sent back to England at the expense of the department of immigration. The family comprised the mother and three children. They arrived in London from England about three months ago, and ever since have been a charge upon the city.

Ald. Stevenson asked that the medical health officer present to the board a monthly report of his work, including the number of contagious diseases, deaths, etc., in the city. Dr. Hutchinson promised to prepare a report as asked.

Chairman English, Ald. Stevenson, Messrs. Skinner, Taylor and Carrothers, Medical Health Officer Hutchinson, Inspector McCallum and City Clerk Baker were present.

MISS STRONG'S LAUNDRY

Famous Grand Opera Star Making Money By Ironing Board.

London, Oct. 9.—Susan Strong, the American grand opera star, has opened a special laundry for lingerie de luxe in Baker street, London.

"I am not giving up my concert platform for the ironing boards, but shall combine the two," she said. "I love my singing too dearly to desert it altogether. I first made up my mind to start a laundry on my return from America, when I found the musical profession was paying as well as ever around for some other work."

"The idea came to me from my maid Pauline. Years ago we searched for a laundry which would wash dainty garments with care and yet not charge prohibitive prices. I could not find such a place, so Pauline became my laundress-in-chief, at my own home. After years of work she developed into an expert. When some remunerative work became necessary we put our heads together and this is the result."

"But why was other work necessary when you played the leading parts in grand opera?"

"It is a complicated subject to discuss," replied the opera star. "I should like to say that it is difficult to be an honest worker on the stage. There are many wires which must be pulled that a grand opera salary is earned by hard work. Then I asked myself why spend it all in getting engagements?"

"I am proud of my little laundry because it is absolutely different from any other. It is the most engaging stage smile."

But if one expects to see the grand opera laundry anything like the ordinary commercial enterprise he is badly mistaken. The washhouse, where all is done by hand with the finest soaps and the most costly utensils, consists of white walls and floor and the tubs are as spotless as white can be.

Every customer has his—or rather her—own wash tub. The drying-room is lighted by an enormous window, the room being flooded with sunshine, while the ironing-room is carried out in shades of powder blue and leaf green. The packing-room is lined with white wood cupboards where the creations of chiffon lace are hidden away in nests of pink and blue and mauve tissue paper.

FALLS ON BIG BRUIN

Wounded Bear Seizes His Tormentor and Seeks Revenge.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 9.—After a hand-to-hand fight with a black bear, during which he received 50 bites and scratches, August Laitinen has sufficiently recovered from the ensuing fever to be able to tell us exciting bear story as ever was published.

Laitinen, who is ranching five miles from Salmon Arm, heard something in his orchard at night and went down to investigate. He saw a big black bear munching his fruit and fired four rifle shots at the brute. The bear made off, and the farmer lost sight of him. Laitinen went in the direction he thought the animal had taken.

In the dark the man fell across a log right on top of the bear, which immediately seized him. The bear had been wounded, however, and his grasp was not as strong as it would have been otherwise. As it was the rancher had his clothes torn to ribbons, was bitten in a dozen places, and scratched all over his body. Laitinen managed to fire three more shots while the bear was on top of him. These finally killed the bear, and the man managed to crawl out of the animal's reach and so got home. The bear weighed 360 pounds.

MAKE RETROSPECT OF COBALT CLAIMS

Pure Silver Showing Above the Ground Is Idly Passed by for Years.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—More than 300 years ago French explorers in the Canadian wilds passed through Lake Temiskaming midway between Buffalo and Hudson Bay, within five miles of the present site of the Cobalt mining camp.

Weather-blackened silver, purer than coin, stuck up in plain sight through the thin soil of the rock hillsides. The find escaped the lumberman and was not made until the Government was building the Temiskaming and Northern Railroad.

One morning Fred La Rose, blacksmith for the construction gang, stumbled on it. As he sat by his wayside forge a bit of color on the hillside caught his eye. It was pink. When cobalt, a metal like nickel, is long exposed it oxidizes to a bright pink powdery "bloom." Idly La Rose walked over to see what the pink was. With a shovel La Rose soon uncovered beneath the pink a vein of pure silver that filled a deep crack in the rock. He showed a chunk of the metal to the construction boss, and the two staked out adjoining claims. About the same time a lumberman named McKinley, cutting out ties for the railroad, found cobalt bloom and then silver in another hill a mile away. McKinley sold out later for $300,000 or $400,000 and moved away to live in affluence. The mine he found is worth millions. La Rose was persuaded to sell his share for $50,000. There was a long suit in the Canadian court, and at last he got $28,000 of his remaining interest. The first car of ore from the La Rose mine returned $30,000. Since then many hundred thousand dollars' worth of silver have been taken out.

McMartin, the railroad boss to whom La Rose first showed his find, has a big interest in the mine. Tommy Hubert, a French-Canadian laborer, found the Nipissing mine. He cannot read nor write. Last year the Nipissing shipped $1,125,529 worth of ore. But Hubert, before he knew the value of his find, had been persuaded to sell out for $1,100. Clement Foster, now 25 years old, had been graduated only a short time from a technical school in Michigan when he heard of the first finds. He prospected longer than a year. Then he made his strike. He is now worth millions. W. G. Trethewey worked in the patent office in Montreal. He stopped in Cobalt one day and staked his claims between trains.

John Reddon, manager of the Trethewey mine, said last week that $800,000 worth of silver had already been taken out, at a cost of $50,000, and that the development of the mine has only now begun. The veins at Cobalt are never more than 20 inches wide, but they are almost solid silver. The first find was made in the spring of 1903. Most of the ore already produced has been shoveled and blasted out of surface workings with less cost and labor than it is to dig a sewer in the city street. The ore is sorted by hand and placed in coarse sacks for shipment. The rock from which the ore is sorted is thrown out on a dump. But some day the dumps, will be mined at a profit. About $2,000,000 worth of ore was shipped in 1905. Then shipments ceased because the miners were not paid for the arsenic, cobalt and nickel with the ore. The two or three mines now shipping are to treat these products. The others are waiting the completion of a big smelter they have joined in building at Hamilton, Ont. It will be completed within a few weeks.

MOTOR BUSES IN TRUST

London to Have $30,000,000 Combine and Exterminate Cab Horse.

London, Oct. 8.—Motor omnibus companies, which have almost driven the ancient and honorable "bus horse into retirement, are now negotiating a combine with an estimated capital of $30,000,000 which will place the public completely at their mercy. The trust awaits only the addition of the London General Omnibus Company, the oldest and most important metropolitan bus company, to declare its terms. It is fully expected that the combine will raise fares, as competition with such a gigantic enterprise will be practically out of the question.

The cab horse also is doomed to disappear from London streets. A company has been formed to put 1,500 petrol motor cabs with taximeters on the streets within a year. The large number already working has proved highly successful. The chauffeurs provide their own petroleum and get 25 per cent of the gross receipts.

Accidents caused by the motor buses are of daily occurrence. The noise and speed of the gargantuan vehicles, which weigh nine tons when loaded, make them a perfect terror to the pedestrian. The main thoroughfares have been turned into pandemonium during hours of greatest traffic.

Tea makes for temperance, and consequently law and order. Tea makes for health and happiness, and that is why the sealed lead packets of the "SALADA" Tea Co. are so popular.

ECHOES THAW OUT IN SPRINGTIME

Wonderful Yarn Told in Vancouver About Hearing Sound from Phonograph Rock.

Vancouver, Oct. 8.—The World tells this story: Much has been written of the wonders of the Edison phonograph, of wireless telegraphy, and a host of other discoveries which a few years ago would have been attributed to witchcraft, writes a correspondent, yet hundreds of years before these discoveries were given to the world the Indians of the Yukon were trying to solve the mysteries of what is now known as Phonograph rock, a rocky bluff, situated forty miles above Dawson on the Klondike River.

It is not an uncommon thing for the traveler on the Yukon when passing a rocky bluff to hear his words repeated in echo. It is not an ordinary echo. The traveler and the prospectors, who seldom pass the weird place without stopping to test this unexpected mystery, hear their words repeated again and again. At first the echo is a mere whisper, then it reverberates louder and louder until it reaches the full volume of the human voice; yet it always repeats from the same place and not from different distances like the ordinary echo. The most mysterious thing in connection with this rock is that in the winter when the thermometer registers 40 or more degrees below zero there is no echo, or, as the Indians say, the echo freezes. In the spring when the snow has melted and the ice has gone out of the river these echoes thaw out. Then can be heard the voice of the traveler; the deep, long, dismal howl of the wolf, and the whistling of the winds "of the previous winter. These sounds take about the same space of time to thaw out that it took to freeze them. Thus they are repeated well into the summer. In the spring of 1898, a party of miners who were prospecting on the opposite side of the river from this rock were awakened in the early hours of the morning by a howling howl in their midst. The howl was low and tremulous at first, but kept increasing until it ended in one long, wild yell. They seized their rifles, expecting to be attacked by a band of wolves, but the howling ceased as suddenly as it commenced. The strange features was that the howling seemed to come from within their tent—from their very midst. The wolf must have stood upon the spot where the tent was pitched when he gave forth the cry which months later thawed out and roused the miners from their slumbers.

A few hours later this same party heard the commencement of a winter's storm, and while listening to the howling of the winds they heard a man's voice urging on a team of dogs. The man and dogs seemed to pass within a few yards of them, yet they could see nothing. One of the miners recognized the voice as that of a friend who had died in Dawson two months before. This friend, it seems, had traveled up the Klondike River, the previous winter; but the miners, not knowing this, and being ignorant of the properties of the rock, concluded that the place was haunted, and started to load their tent and outfit into their boat. Before they had completed the loading, although it was a bright clear, balmy spring morning, yet the sounds of a violent winter's storm raging around them frightened them that they abandoned most of their outfit and started down the river.

Walter Johnson, a well-known miner and hunter, went up the Klondike early in the winter of 1899. He used a dog team to haul his outfit to the place where he intended mining. In driving dogs it is necessary to keep talking to them or they will stop, and a successful driver is continually calling his dogs by name, and urging them on in order that each dog will do his share of the work. In the spring of 1900 Johnson built a raft and started for Dawson to "record his claim. While passing this rock he was treated to the echo of his own voice, and heard words he had used to his dogs the previous winter. He arrived at the rock the moment that his echo had thawed out.

A MEDICINE FOR THE MINER'S PAIN.—Prospectors and others going into the mining regions, where doctors are few and drug stores not at all, should provide themselves with a supply of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. It will offset the effects of exposure, reduce sprains, and when taken internally will prevent and cure colds and sore throat, and as a rubricant, will keep the muscles in good condition.

For Fashion Magazines go to Red Star News Company, 8 Market Lane.

One of the causes of epilepsy is declared by Austrian and German physicians to be coffee.

CHEAPEST OF ALL MEDICINES.—Considering the curative qualities of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, it is the cheapest medicine now offered to the public. The dose required in any ailment is small, and a bottle contains many doses. If it were valued at the benefit it confers it could not be purchased for many times the price asked for it, but increased consumption has simplified and cheapened its manufacture.
