No. 5904 and No. 5907. Well shaped underwear is now regarded as a very important part of the up-to-date wardrobe, and women of refined taste spend much time and thought upon these garments. The two pretty models here shown were designed with regard to comfort as well as to appearance. The corset cover is the daintiest little garment possible to wear under the lingerle blouse. The square-cut neck may be made as illustrated, or it could be made of a strip of embroidery. The French circular drawers are very popular just now, as they take the place of an extra underskirt, thus avoiding all extra fulness around the waist. The choicest materials are fine linen, batiste, cambric and nainsook, and some very dainty effects are obtained by the use of ribbon-run beading, lace and embroidery. Miss Amy Daly, the instructress of the Bath Club, is also an interesting personality "in her own right." Miss Daly has been decorated by the Royal Humane Society for plunging into the water fully dressed and saving a woman. She is one of the most expert swimmers in England, and has won no end of prizes and gold medals for life saving, high diving and "fancy" swimming. Among these last-named feats might be mentioned the fact that she once swam the length of the bath backward at the bottom of the water, has covered the length of the bath backward at the length of the bath length of the length

Do You Hear Well?

We wish you to see a new electrically sensitized hearing device called Electrophone, that instantly causes even the deafest people to hear!

The very best result we can promise you as a reward for using the Electrophone is the complets, lasting restoration of your hearing.

Next to that in importance is the certainty that the moment you apply this marvellous little instrument you will be able to hear clearly and distinctly, either in public or in private.

This scientific electrical sound conducting instrument fits snugly over the ear, as shown in out. Its purpose is to magnify sound waves and throw them directly on the ear drum in a manner according to nature. The result is your deaf ear is exercised just as well ears are, and after a while most people find their hearing has become as good as ever. Meanwhile, however, with the Electrophone strain, effort or embarrasment, and your pleasure is vastly increased by the assurance that no harm is being done, as is the case with artificial eardrums, trumphets, etc., that poison and ruin the ears of all who use them. Comes and test the Electrophone in use." receive courteous attention and not be urged to purchase the courteous attention and not be urged to purchase the courteous attention and not be urged to purchase the courteous attention and not be urged to purchase tried an Electrophone exactly suited to your degree of deafness, you pay a deposit on it and try it at home. FIRELIGHT. Summer and love and you, dear;
Summer and love and you!
What should the warm skies do, dear,
But for your eyes of blue?
How are the roses red, dear,
But for your parted lips?
Does not the garden blossom
At touch of your finger-tips?
Is not the whole world gladder
Just for a heart so true?—
Summer and love and you, dear;
Summer and love and you!

See how the skies grow grey; See how the red rose petals Wither and fall away; There is our stricken garden,
Barren in twig and bough;
Where are the flowers hidden?
Where is our gladness now?

Where? I shall tell you, dearest; Here in our solitude, Here is the flowers' heaven, Here is our joy renewed; Back in the ruined garden Only our sorrow lies— All of the stars are shining Still in your starry eyes; So, tho the distant world, dear, Sorrows the winter thru, Here it is always summer; Summer and love and you! English Women and Swimming.

Swimming, as a sport for women, is now one of the "passionate pastimes" of the fair sex in England, writes a London correspondent. One of London's most popular mayoresses is the winner of four gold medals for diving and swimming, while many women of title have established records at the swimming pools provided by the ex-clusive clubs of Mayfair. Among these latter are Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, holder of the Bath Club championship trophy for three years; the duchess of Sutherland and her daughters, Lady Rosemary Levenson-Gower; Lady Diana and Lady Letty Manners, Lady Cairnes and the popular American women, the Countess of Essex, formerly Miss Adele Grant of

New York; Miss Lucie Dodge, Miss Mabel Rainey and others. Clubs in which women are members, but which have no swimming pools are making arrangements for the use the Bain Club facilities, or those some public bath. "Ladies' day" at the baths is becoming one of the most interesting London attractions. At most of the pleasure resorts on the Thames—such as Richmond, Twickenham, Kingston and Windsor, swimming clubs are being organized. Nearly every Saturday afternoon contests in the river may be witnessed, women In the river may be withessed, women being the principal contestants.

In England, many of the women's bathing suits are tight-fitting garments, similar to those worn by men in America. There are no cumbering thinter presidence and nothing the same contesting the sa skirts, no sleeves, and nothing to re tard the progress of the swimmer thru the water. These costumes would be regarded in America as somewhat "brief," to say the least, but in England, the swimmer's comfort and convenience is the first consideration, and while the costume perhaps surpasses the Directoire in its clinging adhesiveness, little regard is paid by the ladles to what might truly be described as feminine "shortcomings."

bers of the club. There is a special entrance for lady members of the Bath Club, and certain days each week are set aside during which they have exclusive use of the swimming pool, which is 70 feet long by 30 feet wide, tiled thruout. The gallery overlooking the pool at the Bath Club is fitted up with a royal box, and King Edward often comes to witness some of the "galas" held by lady swimmers. On the recent gala, held on the Fourth of July, in honor of some of the American members of the club, Queen Alexandra paid one of her popular "surprise" visits. The surprise visits of royalty in England, by the way, are generally known a day or so beforehand, so as to prevent royal embarrassments. Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson is perhaps the most striking personality of all the ladies of title who patbeen most romantic. Before her mar-riage, in 1904, to Sir Edward Stewart-Richardson, she achieved an international reputation as Lady Constance Mackenzie. Besides being a champion

Mackenzie. Besides being a champion swimmer, she is a fearless rider, a skilful fisherwoman with some big "catches" to her credit, an expert polo player, and a remarkable "whip," being equally skilful with a tandem, a four-in-hand and a pair. In addition to all this, she can play the bagpipes, dance the sword dance, fence and shoot.

Supreme Test of Cooking The front of Lady Stewart-Richard-has covered the length of the bath on the surface with hands tied and holds a record for the fast at mile. Miss Daly gives instructions three mornings a week and has adopted certain rules which no one disobeys on pain of being "suspended" from the pool—a dire punishment, considering the enthusiasm of most of the lady swimmers. One of the inexorable rules of Miss Daly is that no one shall stay in the water more than 20 minutes at a time. She believes in swimming every day if possible, but only remaining in the water a few minutes at

For instance, in the recent long-distance swim from the recent long-distance swim from the Republican state platform months' vacation. the recent long-distance swim from Richmond to London—over a course of Zearly 15 miles—six women swimmers competed valiantly with the men, and two of them, Miss Armstrong and Miss Smith, covered the distance in a little over four hours.

The "swellest" swimming pool in London is at the Bath Club in Bondstreet. Regular attendants are the royal family. The Princess of Wales and her two little sons, Albert and Edward, learned to swim here, and even Queen Alexandra, when Princess of Wales, was fond of "taking a header" from one of the diving boards.

The front of Lady Stewart-Richardson's bathing costume is covered with medals which she has won both in swimming and diving. She has a very slim figure and always wears black. At al! the contests in which she takes part, Lady Constance wins unstinted admiration for her graceful poise and movements. She has been nicknamed the "Swallow" for her ease and swiftness in getting thru the water and for her beautiful dives from high altitudes.
