

POETRY

HOME.

Far far away the travellers home,
But he'll find no spot like his own dear home,
Though o'er the mountain and o'er the sea-spray
To far distant climes he may wander away.
O'er Italy fair he may ramble long,
And beauty still find in that land of song;
Though he loves to gaze on the soft blue sky,
And the vine-clad hills may be dear to his eye,
And he may delight in the cataract's foam—
But is that spot dear as his native home?

To the isle of Greece he may chance to stray,
And wander among the ruins gray;
Or marks that passed in times of old
In a land of sages and warriors bold.
Though he see the spot where in days gone by,
The sound of deadly strife rose high;
Though he loves to gaze on that fair scene,
There is nought remains of what have been,
Where warriors trod now flowers bloom—
But oh! is that spot like his own dear home?

He may view the mountains crown'd with snow,
Or the verdent mead far spread below,
Where flowers are fair and skies are bright,
And in that scene he may feel delight.
But still at times will the wanderer sigh,
For the pleasant scenes which have long passed by.
For no place to him so dear can be,
As the land where he played in infancy;
Though long he may wander and far he may roam,
There's no spot on earth like his own dear home.

THE CONSERVATIVES (CORONATION HYMN)

Air—Spanish Chant.—[BY A LADY.]

Come O Lord!—and bless our land
Rise now throughout the Land;
Man may form the social ring,
Though alonst the heart can't bring:
Come than, Lord, and bless the scene,
Deck'd for England's "Church and Queen."

Bless with unanimity,
Peace, and love and loyalty!
Let this bright auspicious day
Bask in their unclouded ray;
Fair and smiling as the scene,
Meet to grace a youthful Queen!

Proudly on her maiden brow,
Britain's Crown is resting now—
May she feel the sacred trust!
Feel it still!—The wise!—The just!
Garden of her country's cause,
Pillar of its Church and laws!

"Church the Queen" then—arise the cry!

Let the banner wave on high!—
Church the Queen!—Behold then there!
Sainted mother—daughter fair*;
Mother Church!—Then could it be
Thy sweet child would turn from thee?

Thee!—Whose mild protecting hand
Brought her sires to rule the land!
Thee!—Who now with bonds divine,
Fond her Heav'ly crown, would st twine.
Thee!—By that young heart forget?
Never!—Never!—Doubt her not!
Hark!—That oath's soft thrilling tone!
Fever!—Church and Queen are one!

Raise, then, raise the thrilling cry;
Church and Queen! to fill the sky;
Here the hills, the valleys sing;
Every gale its tribute bring!
Here us Lord!—and bless the scene
Bless our country's "Church and Queen!"

* The Queen of England must be a daughter of that Church, which placed her family on the Throne.—(Coronation Oath).

Matrimonial Happiness.—On Monday Mr. Thomas Powell manfully brought his new married bride before the Magistrate at the Guildhall, and charged her with "abstaining herself from home at those times she ought to be at home." The complainant stated his grievances at great length, complaining of his home being deserted and his comforts neglected. The lady was ready to retaliate, but the worthy Mayor and Magistrate stopped her by dismissing the complaint, at the same time stating that for their own sakes they regretted that there was no law compelling wives to stay at home. Mr. and Mrs. Powell have been eight weeks married: the fifth day of their union was terminated by the lady receiving a sound drubbing, and the husband being locked up in the round house for the night.—The wife took out four warrants against her liege lord for illusage before the honeymoon was passed, and up to the present charge was had been eight times a complaint against him. Mr. R. offered his lady a separate maintenance, but she, "turned to her berth-place, whether loved or spurned," the offer, valiantly declaring she would yet tame and make a good husband of him.

A curious case of manslaughter occurred in the neighbourhood of Alderly, in Cheshire last week—William Coops, a child only seven years old, threw an egg which he had taken from a bird's nest, and which had a live bird within it, at William Pearson, twenty five years old; who said "he would make the little devil eat the egg." According, he thrust it down his throat. The child ran home; was taken very ill; and in a few days gangrene in his throat. Pearson was sent to Chester Castle, on the verdict of a Coroner's Jury, to be tried for manslaughter.

DUELLING.—The courage of duellists has recently been tested in the affair of two members of Congress, who in performance of their legislative duties, have thought it necessary to black-guard each other in the foulest terms; their charges and aspersions involving not only their political, but their moral character also, and a duel thought to be the inevitable result. They are both professed duellists, both fond of fighting, and both have more than once display their courage. One is a dead shot with hair triggers, at eight paces; other equally unerring in his aim with his rifle, at thirty: of course the expected duel has not yet come off. The laws of duelling allowing the challenger to choose the weapon, each of those redoubtable heroes is AFRAID to challenge his antagonist.

A TAVERN INCIDENT.—A traveller domiciling at an American hotel, exclaimed one morning to the waiter, "What are you about, you black rascal, you have roused me twice from my sleep by telling me breakfast is ready, and now you are attempting to strip off the bed clothes; what do you mean?" "Why replied Pompey, "if you isn't gone to get up, I must hab de sheet any how, cause dey'r waitin for de table clof."

PORT DRINKERS. It has been proved, by analysis, that some Port wine contains about one half of its bulk of pure brandy, and that every time a man drinks two bottles strong body Port he drinks one of brandy; yet how many are there not content with the quantity. Sir John Sinclair gives us an instance of a Mr. Vanhorn, who daily, for twenty-three years drank his four bottles; altogether thirty-five thousand six hundred and eighty-eight bottles; and, as our guide to longevity, Sir John quaintly observes, "in the course of his potation, he resembled a cellar more than a man, for there are many cellars that never contained what this man must have done, namely, fifty-nine pipes of Port."
