Your loving MAY.

P. S. I will be good when I come to your house. Be sure you tell him.

P. S. Tell him I'm a nice littel girl. I do want to come.

P. S. I was forth in Arithmetick and the standard fields who came along to get away from them and have a home of her own. I own all that. I don't flatter myself that she fell in love with a solemn, middle-aged man like me; but I do believe that she likes me. She's going to like me better!

I'll keep her young and smilling, please God. . . She may be going to marry me for my money if she didn't like me pretty well. Sometimes I even think it wasn't just for my money, but—but it's easy for a man to be a fool!

AMUSEMENTS. IRISH MUSIC AT NICKEL TODAY.

This is Irish music day at the Nickel for tomorrow (Wednesday), the treatre is handed over to the Catholic societies for their theatricals in aid of the orphanages. The Nickel's fine orchestra will render the following airs in honor of St. Patrick and thousand people were unable to gain admittance so strong a magnet did this specialty prove and those who heard it were entranced with the sparkling libretto and melodious musical introductions. It is the story of a Gypsy princess and a strolling land-scape artist and teems with merry witticisms and happy surprises. Mr. Buchanan sang, "The Isle of Love;" Miss Holmes, "The Gypsy Fortune-Teller," and in duet they sang, "Love's Old Sweet Song." This act will be repeated this afternoon at 4 o'clock and tonight at 5.15 and 9.15. Mr. Courtnais in the sea ballad, "Anchored," and four metion pictures.

P. S. I will be good when I come to your house. Be sure you tell him. P. S. Tell him I'm a nice litted girl. I do want to come.

They mean people ... you're right.
They'ree distressing study, our fellowmen. Our fellow-women are worse, I think-Mrs. Hambleton excepted ...
If I consider my wife a wonderful
woman and I don't care who knows it,
sir!
One of our fellow-women distilusioned us on the trip. Frances was quite upset about it. We used to say that she was the sort of a girl we'd have liked to have, if we'd ever had a daughter.
Smiles for everybody!
She was about one and twenty; an orphan and dependent on a family named Pinch. The women Pinches treated har disgracefully. Frances thought of offering to have her with us at the end of the voyage. I don't think she was ever so taken with anyone. .. Well, the girl ended the voyage engaged to the richest man

of Colonel Samuel P. Colt, of Bristol, R. I., were married in the Church of the Most Preclous Blood in Hyde Park
at 9.30 o'clock yesterday morning, the Rev. Father Chittick officiating, according to an announcement made tonight by Miss Barrymore's manager.

The marriage was witnessed by John Barrymore, brother of the Broom,
both of whom returned to New York
after the ceremony.
