ONE SMILE

ONE SMILE.

BY O. LINKEUS BARK, ESQUIRE.

One smile of thine—one parting smile,
To light me on my lonely way,
Lee sil that should this heart beguile,
Like summer blossoms fades away.
We not be perchance may meet again,
O'r wear the hope of bygone years,
But live in solitude and print.
Companioned by returning towar.
One smile of thine—if not too muchTo ask ere yet for aye we part,
Though that instinctive smile may touch
The koopenet fives of my heart.
Yet will the pang I'll gladly beer,
When parchased by a smile of thine;
For earth holds not a face so fair
As that which beamed how on mine.

One parting smile—'tis only one.
And will not leave thee me the less.
(When I from these sweet are gone,)
To win a blessing or to bless.
I thank thee; all is past! farewell:
The last connecting link is rivenNote, whereso'er my spirit dwell.
Thy memory must be its heaven!

TO SAPPHO. Like the voice of summer birds.
In the forest sweetly ringing—
Like the spell of parting words
To the lonely boson olinging—
Is thy voice, then little Sopphe,
Is the music of thy tongue,
When thy infant spirit cleaveth
To the swelling tide of song.

Take the star of morning peering
As a spirit through the sky—
Like the sun, whose lustre nearing.
Wipes the dow from beauty's eye—
Is thy smale, thou child of genius—
Is th' expression of thy (see,
When the gift of inspiration
Makes thy breast its dwelling place

Like a something that has glided O'er the wakeful mind in dream-O'er the wakeful mind in droam— ike a sovething, pure and brighter.
Than the ering heorit can deem—
Is the nature, lovely Soppho—
Is the presence here on earth:
There's not a though that moveth to
But then hast given it birth.
