HOMES OF THE WEALTHY AND POOR DEMOLISHED IN THE TERRIFIC TORNADO THAT SWEEPED THE WESTERN STATES.

HANSCOM PARK, WHERE THE STORM FIRST STRUCK OMAHA

RESIDENCE OF MRS. BEN GALLAGHER IN THE PATH OF THE STORM WHERE MRS. GALLAGHER WAS INJURED

TYPE OF RESIDENCE IN DEVASTATED FARNAM STREET DISTRICT HOME OF JOHN R. COAD AT 3716 FARNAM STREET

SCENE OF DEATH AND DESOLATION, WITH HUGE MASSES OF TORN AND WRECKED BUILDINGS PILED IN HEAPS ONE UPON ANOTHER, SOME OF THEM A MASS OF CHARRED RUINS FROM FIRES, WHILE UNDER MANY OF THEM LIE THE DEAD AS YET UNACCOUNTED FOR.

Governor James H. Moorehead, of Nebraska, and "Cowboy Mayor" James Dahlman, of Omaha, are making every effort to care for the injured and homeless as well as protect the devastated sections from the hands of thieves.

In the above photographs are shown Governor Moorehead and Mayor Dahlman and some of Omaha's most beautiful residences, which were destroyed by the cyclone. The Field Club was one of the first buildings to suffer after the storm had devastated Hanscom Park.

Nearly 200 dead and a much larger number injured and a property loss of over $12,000,000 is a conservative estimate of devastation in Omaha, Neb., alone resulting from the cyclone which cut a path four to six blocks wide and eight miles in length through the residential section of that city and its suburbs.

Reports from other cities and towns in seven Western States swell the total of loss of life and injured considerably, while the total loss of property is as yet incalculable.

It is believed that the list of dead in Omaha will be considerably increased above present estimates when the full harvest of death and injury has been counted. Thousands of those who escaped death or injury in Omaha, as well as in a score of other cities and towns, are homeless and in need of immediate help.

The swath torn through the residential section of Omaha is an awful
