Quebec Opposition Likely to Show Big Gains, in Which Case Laurier's Star Would Seem to be Waning—No Longer Any "Solid Quebec"—Big Influence of New Brunswick Elections.

(Special Correspondence of The Telegraph).

Quebec, March 14.—The result of the New Brunswick elections is much mused in political circles in this province. How to maintain Quebec "solid for Laurier" is a fruitful subject of discussion.

CATTLE DISEASE HELPS EMBARGO
London cable to the New York Herald says: The recent discovery of cattle-disease in Scotland is a grave disappointment to the cattle breeders and others who have for several years been agitating for a relaxation of the embargo on live cattle from the United States, Argentina and Canada.

It is feared that it will be a long time now before the board of agriculture will lend a friendly ear to the pleas and arguments of those who desire to see the removal of restrictions on the importation of live stock. Some of the familiar arguments are now quite obsolete. Dead meat can be brought from America and sold in the large towns of England at a cheaper rate than meat killed in England.

The government says that granted that foreign grown meat can be introduced from America and other countries into Great Britain and be sold at prices which pay the foreign growers, there is no longer any advantage to introduce it alive rather than dead.

It is now generally admitted that meat from America can be carried to England in as good condition as though the cattle were brought alive to London or Bickenhead and then slaughtered. Indeed, it has long since been proved that the carriage of meat in good condition is a very much easier problem than the carriage of live cattle in good condition, and that meat necessarily takes up less room when dead than when alive.

It is not a matter of material comfort; it is the knowledge that one is an outcast, that the understanding that the kind hearted you are an object of charitable curiosity, and to the others just a simple card. These are things which no man can fight with.

Cooke has some friends who say that as soon as it is known that he is in want there will be no trouble about his getting everything he needs. They say that it is only by reason of the fact that he has not told any one of his straits that he is in trouble.

Forest Protection.
The announcement to the forestry convention by Hon. Sydney Fisher that the government proposed to make of practical effect the entire eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains a forest reserve, was deservedly applauded by the members of the association. We cannot now take too many pains to conserve this invaluable form of national wealth. The Rocky Mountain reserve is not to be locked up from the people, but to be matched over by the government and "cropped" for such timber as can be safely taken in a scientific manner.

This is a modern policy which means well beyond a large area. Robert Meighen made a practical suggestion indicating a way in which both federal and provincial governments might prevent the inevitable destruction of much standing timber which now threatens. He pointed out that the new transcontinental railway is being run through hundreds of miles of the best timber lands, and expressed the fear that it would lead to many disastrous forest fires if care were not taken to hinder them. He did not fear the spark from the locomotive, but the carelessness of construction gangs, and urged that suitable precautions be taken to prevent such a catastrophe.

The business of the men who are in touch with the facts in this duty of forest preservation, we to stir up the people and compel the attention of governments. It is only our ignorance of the facts which enables us to be so careless, as a people, as we are in this matter. When W. W. Price, assistant chief of the American department of forestry, tells us that the stock available for supply in standing timber in the United States will be used up in twenty or thirty years at the present rate of consumption, we ought to begin to understand that a treeless monopoly we have in our possession.
