A stalwart butcher boy and a nimble dry goods derk engaged in a friendly scuffle on Germain street this forenoon. The latter tripped his antagonist and then ran towards King street. The butcher allowed his angry passion to rise, and, seizing a stone, hurled it at the retreating knight of the yard stick with such unerring precision as to make a well defined "bull's eye" in the plate glass window of Mr. Chaloner's drug store. Mr. Chaloner interviewed the sharp-shooter, who consented to repair damages—about $15 worth.
