Do you support the demands of the janitorial staff for higher wages and increased job security?

Jim Warfield Arts Post Grad.

$2.25 an hour is not a living. Why should a janitor have to take on a second job in order to make a living when they perform an essential service in their first job?

Peter Gammon Science 2

$3.00 an hour is a bare minimum to live on with the prices these days. UNB underpays a lot of its non-professional help.

Philip Kelly Elec. Engi. 2

I'd inventory their input and output against what they're being paid, and then I would evaluate what their worth is to the University, and increase their salary accordingly.

Richard Evans Arts 3

I think they're doing a good enough job to give them better wages. Maybe the University should pay them themselves.

Geoffrey Gammon - staff Audio-Visual services

Certainly-without higher wages and job security as incentives, how can one expect better work out of these individuals?

Tom Best Science 1

They should have an increase in pay because the cost of living has gone up quite a bit.

Ros Corey Chem. Engi. 1

Sure, they're underpaid and understaffed. They don't have enough personnel to do the job they're hired to do.

Mary Elder Arts 1

I definitely agree they should be given higher wages in accordance with the economy. It's not fair that they should lose their seniority.

John Bagnall Science 3

I agree with the employees' demands for job security and for an increase in wages to meet with today's rise in the cost of living.

Elizabeth Godbout Arts 4

Yes. If their complaints are in earnest, then they have reason to complain and should get their demands.
