

gether to determine the cause. They found under the microscope petty vermicles spread upon the whole superficies of the characteristically rough skin and concluded them to be the cause. It is perhaps better not to know things than to know things that are not so.

24.—We know that Lange ascribed syphilis to microscopic worms and Hauptman to small insects—a mere difference in terminology.

OSGOODE HALL.