THE FRUIT GARDEN.

The excellent condition of the soil and other work not being so pressing, the fall is the most advantageous time for settling the plants for a fruit garden. We have often urged that every farmer should have a fruit garden—one large enough to furnish all the fruit necessary for a continuous supply for the table, from the coming of the earliest strawberries untill the latest grapes are gone. Now is the time for all who lack this supply to stop and count their loss, and take steps to make that loss good in coming years by planting a fruit garden this autumn. Those who already have such a garden will need to give it some attention this month. Strawberry plants that have been rooted in pots, if planted in the fall, will bear a fair crop next year. Runners that have rooted in the usual way, will need a year's growth before fruit in quantities may be expected. Plants set this fall will have some advantage over those set next spring, in a more vigorous growth, and, as it is a less busy time, it is best to set them in the fall. Growers of plants usually advise spring planting largely, because the plants that are set out in the fall would, if kept in the propagating bed, put out runners and produce other good plants, to be used for the spring sales.

Grape vines, both old and young, need pinching of the shoots. If mildew occurs, as it frequently does after a wet spell, followed by a bright hot sun, dust flowers of Sulphur upon the leaves.

SLEEPING ; OR, THIS AND THAT.

Some one-sided, one-eyed individual has made the following calculation, which is mathematically correct, but practically as false and mischievous as can well be expressed in plain English :

THIS.

"The difference between rising every morning at six and at eight, in the course of forty years, amounts to twenty-nine thousand three hundred and ninety hours, or three years, one hundred and twenty-one days and sixteen hours, which are equal to eight hours a day for exactly ten years ; so that rising at six will be the same as if ten years of life were added, wherein we may command eight hours every day for the cultivation of our minds and the dispatch of business."
