THE THREE KINGS OF COLOGNE.

From out Cologne there came thre To worship Jesus Christ, their King. To Him they sought fine herbs they brought, And many a beauteous golden thing They brought their gifts to Bethlehem town, And in that manger set them down. Then spake the first king, and he said : "O, Child, most heavenly, bright and fair! I bring the orown to Bethlehem town For Thee, and only Thee, to wear; So give a heavenly crown to me When I shall come at last to Thee! The second then : "I bring Thee here This royal robe, O Child !" he cried ; "Of silk 'tis spun, and such s one There is not in the world beside ; So in the day of doom requite

Me with a heavenly robe of white. The third king gave his gift and quoth : Spikenard and myrrh to Thee bring, And with these twein would I most fain Anoint the body of my King. So may their incense sometime rise To plead for me in yonder skies!" Thus spake the three kings of Cologne. That gave their gifts and went their way, And now kneel I in prayer hard by The cradle of the Child to-day. Nor crown, nor robe, nor spice I bring

As offering unto Christ, my King. Yet have I brought a gift the Child May not despise, however small; For here I lay my heart to-day, As it is full of love to all. Take Thou the poor, but loyal thing, Human empires confer special honors upon individuals renowned for their erudition, military genius and patrictism. These qualities overshadow all the secret moral delinquencies of national heroes. In canonization the Church does not descriminate between learned and unlettered, prince and peasant. To be enrolled upon her saintly calendar it is not necessary to devastate a city or an empire. All the Church requires is that we gain a complete victory over our sinful pas sions, and that we practice in a heroic degree those virtues which bring happiness to the individual, to the family and to the nation.
