The Bible in the School and the Churches

ME EDITOR, SIR-I noticed in one the Goderich papers that Mr Salton is still pleading for the Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible in our public schools. What does Mr Salton want? That we should read to our pupils every word in the Bible? If that is what he wants, he will never get it. Mr Salton does not read all of the Bible from his pulpit. Does he want us to teach the Bible as we teach the other subjects of could be ousted by this means, proceeding at the foot of harbor hill as a monuscing, of which our informant says there is already abundance of evidence. Woods had one of the women that the close of the day t knowledge to their people? Is preach ing sermons on subjects that are not in either the Bible or "Scripture Readings" likely to lend the people to study their Bibles? When Mr Salton thinks of the Bible as almost out of our public schools, does the thought never strike him how very near it is to the doors of our churches on the way out. I am sure he must have noticed when he gave out his text for the first sermon on the Ross Bible-as it is now called by many-the rustle as his people rapidly turned over the leaves of the Bible to find his text. Or am I mistaken, and was the rustle of leaves inaudible? Surely mone of the Sabbath school teachers in Mr Salton's church would think of teaching or allowing their pupils to answer from "Lesson Helps," but if Mr Salton has never seen it done, I can assure him it is. Possibly Mr Salton is not aware that it is becoming fashionable to preach sermens on subjects that will attract a large crowd, and that in this way much time that we fancy might be more profitably employed in Bible study is lost.

I have noticed in several churches that the pastor has a Bible class of his cengregation each Sabbath, and with good results. I have one in mind now, that of Rev. Mr Parsons, of Knox church, Toronto, where a class of several hundred met each Sunday for Bible study, and many of us thought it the most profitable service of the day. Now, suppor-ing the ministers of our different churches put all their church machinery in force, and kept it running full time, having for gent Bible students, I think they will be successful in dispelling the Bible ignorance of the present day without further aid from the public school than is given by opening the school with prayer and reading a portion of Scripture from the Selections. A TRACERE.

The Toronto News seems to get down 61 to hard pan, as Westerners say, when it ment, regarding the final resting place of Woods' remains. Woods' body was found, and sent to London, where his called to the Dominion Senate.
