Dealing first with the military pect of the question he laid down two propositions, one that all forces of oversees states should be under control of these states, and second, SOCIAL REFORMS that they should be organized on common Imperial basis.

Regarding the navy he did not consider useless any local attempt at naval defence, but anything in the nature of coastal protection should le rigidly subordinate to fleet action. The fate of the Empire in the last resort would be dependent of the fleet superiority and that superiority must be shown in the home waters If there was to be an armageddon it would take place in the German oc ean, the English channel or perhaps the Mediterranean.
