Elastic Bands and Quarrels.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"For to be worth with one we love doth work like madness in the brain."

Somehow or other we fell to talking about quarrels between married folks the other evening.

Of course the woman whose husband "never said a cross word to me" was represented. "I don't see what people quarrel about," she said. "We never quarrel."

The Never-Said-A-Cross-Word People.

One knows not whether to marvel or doubt when people say that never-said-a-cross-word sort of thing.

I once visited a woman who made that claim and her husband certainly said some things that I should have called cross. And she folded her lips up in a manner that indicated just as much irritation and resentment as if she had spoken.

Another member of our group said that she and her husband didn't really quarrel either, but she was honest enough to confess that it was merely because he shut up and refused to answer her when she got mad.

The Last Year's Bride Loved Quarrels.

"I don't suppose you've had any quarrels yet," some one said, turning to the last year's bride.

"Yes, we have," she said, "And I was just going to say I really love them."

"Love them!" repeated the never-spoke-a-cross-word one in horror.

The last year's bride nodded. "Making up is so wonderful that it's worth while to quarrel," she said.

"We never love each other so much as just after a quarrel. It's like the wonderful sunshine you get after a thunderstorm has cleared the air." She turned to the Lady-who-always-knows-somehow. "Don't you think so?"

But Think of The Damage Thunderstorms Do.

The Lady smiled. "Don't thunderstorms sometimes do damage that not even beautiful weather afterwards can compensate for?" she asked. Then, from about the tape measure in her work basket she produced an elastic band. "If I stretch this band way out it comes back with a snap," she said. "That's a quarrel — you stretch your relationship and it proves its strength by coming back with a snap. But if you go on stretching it, it won't come back quite so strongly and by and by it will lose some of its resiliency and by and by a little more. So, if you want to keep it strong and resilient you musn't stretch it any more than you have to. That's the way I look at it.

The last year's bride looked thoughtfully. "I wouldn't have it lose its strength for anything on earth," said she.

"I don't think there's much danger," smiled the lady.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mrs. E. Coffin, of St. John's, is in town on a brief visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Tetford.

Capt. John Tucker and Mrs. Tucker are in town on a visit to their many friends.

Rev. F. S. Coffin leaves by Thursday evening's train for Grand Falls, where he will remain Sunday, leaving on Monday en route to Truro where he will attend the Presbyterian Synod, soon to take place there. The rev. gentleman will be absent about three weeks.

One of the hardest gales of wind experienced here for a number of years raged here in the early hours of to-day, and as a result the schr. Dorothy M. Sheppard, master, now lies on bottom to the west of the public wharf with her cargo of 1,000 qtls. dry fish. The Dorority had been fish collecting for the F. P. U., and ran in here on Saturday night for shelter. After parting her chains this morning the crew had to leave her hurriedly to save their lives.

The schr. Eclipse, owned by Messrs. Munn & Co., arrived from Labrador on Saturday; she also is ashore in the lower part of the harbour.

The brigt. St. Simon, at Murray & Crawford's wharf fell over on Munn & Co.'s wharf and damaged it considerably.

The schr. Minnie Maud, anchored in the harbour, also drifted in to the wharf and sustained some damage.

Crocker's schr. Marton, moored near Archibald's factory, parted her chains and came on shore near the site of the old slip.

A coal vessel at McRae's wharf pounded considerably and is much damaged.

Mr. John Parsons' schooner of the South Side, is ashore near Ship Head.

A stable belonging to Mr. K. Alcock, on the Hill, was levelled to the ground by the force of the wind.

Several motor and other boats moored about the harbour were either sunk or very much damaged.

A large number of houses had window glass broken, also some of the shops on Water Street sustained similar damages.

The wind which was at first about S. W. by S. veered to the N. W. about 3 a.m.

Many people were up all night trying to secure their property from destruction.

It is to be hoped we will hear of no more serious losses than we have sustained in this harbour.

Trees, fences, etc., in all directions are scattered about as a result of the great force of the wind. Several chimneys were also blown down.

At about 3 o'clock the falling trees near Bannerman Street disconnected the wires and plunged the town in darkness. The genial repairer, Mr. James Gorman, has a staff of men on to-day repairing damages to the line.

On the hill the force of the wind was felt much more severely than in town, and very few of the people living there retired to bed for the night, fearing the collapse of houses, etc.

Hot Weather Philosophy.

In this hot weather it will make us feel a little more comfortable to think of cool things, like snow and ice. So, first let us remember that there is a wet season ahead, and after that the snowy and frosty season. We shall have to be out in all kinds of weather, and the only way to enjoy life under all the different conditions is to be comfortably clad. For instance, if your feet are encased in nice, stylish, well-fitting Bear Brand Rubber Shoes, the state of the streets will not worry you in the slightest degree. Of course, nobody is buying rubber shoes just yet, but the time will soon come, and then, isn't it better to buy one good, well-fitting pair that will last you the greater part of the winter, rather than half-dozen pairs of shoddy shoes, that you will always find broken on the mornings that the slush is inches high?

Wouldn't Have Written Notes

London Chronicle:— The evidence collected by the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs shows conclusively that the civilians who were forcibly removed from Lille by the German military under the pretence that they were to be employed in producing food for the population of the portion of France occupied by the enemy have, as a matter of fact, been employed in military services against their own countrymen. It was promised them that they should be taken far from the war zone to reap the peaceful harvests. They find themselves occupied in burying the corpses of the soldiers and the cattle which have been killed by shell on the very field of battle, and some of the women are forced to be the servants of German officers or to make sandbags for the German trenches. Others have been subjected to indignities of the grossest character. A belligerent Power like Great Britain can do nothing in resentment of these outrages but redouble its efforts to beat Germany, but if this country had been a neutral in a war in which such enormities had occurred we cannot help believing that it would have addressed a stern and unmistakable protest to the Government guilty of them.

Citizens' Committee.

Chairman Soper presided at last night's meeting of the Citizens' Committee, which opened at 8.15. The Secretary read the minutes of the last meeting which were adopted. Discussion of the new Municipal Bill then commenced. Sections 138 to 158 were gone through, 16 of which were passed as they stood. In Section 145, in relation to the fencing of vacant property within 14 days after notice has been given the property owner, Sub-Section 2 shall read: "The Council shall have power to prescribe the height and description of fence to be erected." Section 148, "It shall not be lawful for any railway engines or cars to remain stationary on the crossing of any street," to which "motor cars and other vehicles" were added. Section 149 was amended to read, "lock gates should be used on the railway crossings within the city limits." Section 150 Sub-Section (h). The committee voted to take away from the impounder the right to enter private property on which cattle may be feeding. Some interesting episodes, not particularly favorable to the manner in which this official performs his work, were related by some of the committee men. It was shown that on one occasion, six cows, the property of an institution for Orphans, were grazing in a field within the city limits, when through some mysterious medium the rope untied itself on the gate and the cattle walked out. The impounder and his assistants who passed the field about five minutes previously were quickly back on the job and collared the animals as soon as they appeared on the public street. The consequence was that the Home for the Orphans had to hand over $12 for their return. Section 156, dealing with the scale of fares, rates and charges which shall be paid licensed cab-drivers was changed to read, "The Council shall, from time to time, fix and prescribe a scale of fares for cabmen or motor vehicles."
