He finally optained a position in an Idaho village under the name of "Alice Baker," and taught school an entire session without anyone suspecting his secret.

Still posing as a woman he went to Los Angeles in 1910, Baker said he met a young attorney there who proposed marriage and a ceremony was performed. Baker alleged that the attorney later exercised an hypnotic influ-ence over him and induced him to take a course of engraving in an art schoo to make him proficient in counterfeiting. Later they perfected $7,000 worth of bogus bills of the $100 denomination and took them to Japan, where the bills were exchanged for gold. their return to California Baker said, the attorney proposed that they steal the blank money order book at the Summerland postoffice.
