Own Your Home

The act of putting your own oof over your head gives you back the independence need. It gives you freedom from fear and uncertainty you cannot escape at times when you depend on others.

It proves your ability and gives you confidence in yourself. It gives you the courage and self-reliance to strike out boldly and exact your full rights from the whole world, without fear or favor. It gives the spirit that wins through sheer positiveness and refusal to consider defeat

It makes you a self-startera go-getter—a dominant doer. It begets self-respect, independence of spirit, and self-reliance.

It develops initiative and sets people in motion.

It awakens honest pride, establishes higher ideals, and raises the standards of living. It confers responsibility and develops persistency and de-
