SCHOOLBOY HOLDS CLUE TO MURDER

Fashionably Dressed Woman Now Sought in Slaying of O'Bannion.

NOTED GANGSTER

Associated Press Despatch. Chicago, Nov. 12 .- A schoolboy's story that he saw a young, fashionably dressed woman drive the auto mobile in which escaped the three slayers of Dion O'Bannion, notorious gang leader, florist and hijacker, was used as a guide today by the police in their efforts to run down the Anthony Pferschy, 13, said he was one of several boys passing O'Bannion's flower shop when the shooting occurred. One of the three men who ran out bumped into him and knocked him down. The man ran to the corner and crowded into the automobile the door of which was held open by the woman.

The story renewed the "find the woman" activities of the police begun when they heard of a quarrel between O'Bannion's lieutenants and a rival gangster over the slapping of the latter's wife by Margaret Collins.
Another girl who figured in the investigation was Mary Laude, 17, who was held after she came to the fed eral building inquiring for the wife of Louis Alterie, a friend of the slain

Detectives also sought any connec tion with the slaying of O'Bannion and the shooting last night of James Marks, Canton, Ohio, who said he was a truck driver, although his clothes of private make bore New York labels and his hands belied the
