

the fact as to the taste of the members of the various literary institutions which I think is remarkable. We were told that demand was a favourite study (cheers); now, I think it a matter of congratulation, that contemporary with this increased demand for history we find a satisfactory revolution in that department of literature. We see a truth-seeking inquisition at work, which refuses to accept the low and party views of the historians of the last century; the data upon which history is to be formed are carefully sought out, and from them independent conclusions are formed, often at variance with received notions and opinions. The formation and success of societies like the Camden, the Roxburgh, the Archaeological, and others which are constantly bringing those data to light, are proofs of the zeal and earnestness with which the records of the mighty past are being ransacked for the benefit, we may hope, of the future. In a social and political point of view— I repeat his good which may accrue to this country from having its past history not a mere record of the kings and queens and the battles they fought, but the history of its inner life, the habits, thoughts, and tastes of its people, the real aims and objects of its governors laid faithfully before us, because I am every day more and more convinced that half the mischief which is done to a country like this by its legislators and rulers is done from a misunderstanding of its past history (cheers); and it is to societies like these and to meetings like these that we are to look for the way to a faithful understanding of the past, most look for support and encouragement against the obloquy and opposition which every one who disturbs the slumber of contending literary must encounter. (Cheers.) In another, perhaps less substantial, but an important branch of contemporary literature—that of taste and the fine arts, no one can entertain a doubt as to the salutary change which has come over the popular mind in that respect. Glancing at the literary advertisements, observe the wide variety in every bookseller's shop, on every stall at your railway stations, enter the schools of design now happily opening in some of our large towns, listen to the lectures of such men as Professor Dyer or Professor Willis—in all we see signs not to be misunderstood of an improved, a more noble, a more English, a more Christian taste. That which Mr. Rio and others have so appropriately termed Christian art has more raised its head, and is more fair to emulate, not to surpass, but to emulate its past grandeur and beauty. (Cheers.) Be it then the part of the Manchester Athenaeum to cultivate and foster that many literature and that rising art in their efforts to render this age and this place, already so remarkable for their commercial and manufacturing greatness, equally so for the purity and beauty of their arts and literature.—(Cheers.) Be it yours to render obsolete the taunt that manufactures must produce a dreary, harsh, unpoetical, material spirit, be it yours to practically refute the terrible caricature which has been drawn by the master of design now happily opening such a town as Manchester in 1840, and in 1840, by inducing a love for, and an appreciation of, whatever is elevating and ennobling in the fine arts and literature: do this—(Cheers.) I know there will still be tasks of greater moment and greater difficulty to accomplish, but do this—and you will have done somewhat; you will have brought together in harmony elements heretofore most contradictory; you will have used them for preparing the ground, it may be, for others to bring into full cultivation; you will have set an example to the people of England, that however weighty political differences may be, social good and improvement may still more so; and depend upon it your children's evening will have reason to bless those evenings spent as this evening is being spent, in good fellowship and the interchanges of kind words and of thought between the various classes of this crowded empire; and that the noblest and most generous of the noblest tendencies of mind and wealth by the gentle means of literature and art. (Loud and continued cheering.)

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON AND KING'S COLLEGE.—We are happy to record, says the St. Catharines Journal, another act of liberality in his Grace the Duke of Wellington, who has just been elected to the office of Chancellor of King's College, Toronto. The impetus which the name of the noble Duke gave to this work at an early day, by becoming a subscriber, we trust will be imparted to the youth of Canada, in competing for the prize to be conferred on them at the end of each week, the 23rd inst. We would recommend western Members of Parliament, not to leave Toronto later than Saturday the 23rd inst., as after that time, it is not probable that more than an occasional trip will be made by those Steamers to Kingston—Toronto Herald, 14th inst.

THE UPPER CANADA.—It was impossible to doubt the loyalty of the people of Upper Canada, who have been the victims of British troops, and every where met and repelled the invading foreign sympathisers in 1838 and 1839. They have now the additional merit of having seen through and disappointed the shallow sophistry of a few ambitious men, who pretended that they were dependent on and belonged to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and could be governed, in every respect, in the same way as an independent sovereignty. They have understood the Resolutions of the Assembly of the 3d. September, 1841, according to the professed object "to preserve inviolate the rights of the people of the Province," and that the "chief advisers of the Representative of the Sovereign constituting a Provincial Administration under him," should not be a joint or joint, dividing the public among themselves and their friends for the support of their "influence,"—and, in fact rendering themselves irresponsible to the "Head of the Government," representing the Sovereign, and the people.

The practical good sense of the industrious population of Upper Canada, has told them that "harmony" could not be "preserved" by destroying the free will of one of the parties in the Union. But we have three persons living in our district, who are in a different walk of life, and who, in their gallant warriors—but as desiring in their own way, and whose services ought to be commemorated; they were the THREE TAVERN-KEEPERS OF PORT ROBINSON, DILLY COLEMAN, Henry Wm. Tunn, and George Jordan—all warm-hearted sons of the Emerald Isle. They were engaged in a great war, and it is ascribed the triumphant result of the South Riding Election; they spared neither trouble nor expense; their own interests seemed to be altogether lost sight of in their devotion to British interests. Standing high in the estimation of the people of the South Riding, and in the estimation of those who felt that they possessed an influence which might be beneficially exercised,—and they were resolved that no obstacle, possibly to be overcome, should be allowed to stand in the way. Their vigilance was unremitting, their location, in the centre of the Riding, was favourable; the separatist demagogues found to their and discomfiture, that they were not to be permitted unopposed, to mislead the honest yeomanry. The trio, single-handed even—proved rather a heavy match for their revolutionary neighbours. And on the days of polling, it was a fine sight to see the teams of these generous Tavern-keepers flying about in every direction, carrying in voters, and themselves here, there, and every where, active in the good cause. Their horses, we regret to say, are now suffering for it, but our friends murmur not; the object of their hearts has been accomplished. Their conduct furnishes a striking, but reproducible example to the timid and selfish of the party,—who, though they were in the front of the strife—are now content to participate in the triumph; and what commendation does it not reflect on the tri-umph, and what commendation does it not reflect on the tri-umph, and what commendation does it not reflect on the tri-umph.
