

THE STRANGE ADVENTURES OF FLEURY MESPLAT

This is the intensely interesting story of the French printer whom Benjamin Franklin sent from London to Philadelphia, and from Philadelphia to Montreal on a propogandist mission to encourage the French-Canadians to join the American forces against the British; the failure of the scheme, and the founding of the first newspaper in Montreal.

AN ESKIMO PATRIOT, By Lacey Amy

This is the real story of an Eskimo hunter who heard about the war, donned khaki, went to the Front, and fell shouting to his comrades to press on. A tale of genuine human interest.

GOLDWIN SMITH, FOR INSTANCE

In his "Reminiscences Political and Personal", Sir John Willison makes many quick, illuminating sketches of men who have figured prominently in Canadian public life. Take Goldwin Smith, for instance. "No man", says Sir John, "denounced party so freely and laboured so continually to organize new parties. He had a genius for depreciation. He never saw a human face without warts, and he painted the warts first and often in colours that never faded".

A prominent resident of Halifax writes:

"I have been very much pleased in reading the first article contributed by Sir John Willison, and a perusal of the rest of the contents should convince any discriminating reader that you people are trying to put something on the market better than the line of reading material one generally comes across."
