walls of the different houses. Persons living in the Lower-town shall cause the dirt and rubbish so collected to be removed within twenty-four hours, and laid on the Beach at low-water mark, between Mr. Willcocks's Wharf and the Stone Pier at the Canoterie. All the dirt and rubbish of the Upper-town shall be carried without Palace-gate, and laid down on the Beach near to the Intendant's Palace, so as not to be a nuisance, and so far from any house as not to be offensive. As long as the snow remains on the ground the streets shall be kept in good order, at all times level and free from cahoes; cahoes shall be levelled at the expence of the persons neglecting to observe this regulation; whosoever shall not comply with every part of this article shall forfeit ten shillings.

II. The butchers stalls in the Upper and Lower-towns shall be looked on as houses; and the owners of them shall keep the portion of the street or market-place before and behind each stall always clean, under a penalty of five shillings.

III. No horse or hogs shall be suffered to stray in the streets. Any person may seize and confine any hog found in the streets, and he shall employ the Bell-man immediately to publish in the principal streets, but particularly in the street where he took up the hog, that he is ready to deliver it to the owner on his paying ten shillings and all charges; but if no person appears in two days after the Bell-man has cried the hog to claim it, or if a person appears and claims it but refuses two days running to pay the ten shillings and charges, the person in whose possession it is may then retain it for his own use.
