The board of education, at the instance of Superintendent Elson, a few weeks ago decided to drop German in the elementary grades of the public schools. The Germans have become aroused and are insisting that their language be retained. The Irishmen then began a retaliatory movement.

Alcohol No Longer a Drug Medical View Has Changed

Surgeons and Doctors Have Alike | WITH THE B. M. A. TO-DAY. Found that Its Use Is Detrimental to the Patients-Medical Profession As an Agent in World Inprovement.

Yesterday's work of the British Association had no more interesting feature than the Dominion Allfance luncheon in the gymnasium at 1 o'clock. The temperance question has, of course, long passed the fad stage, but vesterday's proceedings, so far as Toronto is concerned, placed the authoritative stamp of medical science upon F. R. S., surgeon of University College Hospital, London; Prof. G. Sims Woodhead, professor of pathology, Cambridge University, and Dr. Murdock Cameron, professor of midwifery, Glasgow University, to mention no others, were sufficient by their presence

Sir Victor was received with pro-longed applause by the crowded audience. Circumstances, he said, would render it impossible for him to take part in to-morrow's discussion in the section of therapeutics, but he could only repeated what he had to say now. Besides, there were points in connection with the real social reform ing on in the old country which he would not be able to refer to at a sec tion meeting. Canadian were probably aware of the attitude of their owr medical men. The French-speaking practitioners had recently passed a strong resolution, and the profession as a whole had indicated a hostile as a whole had indicated a hostile rather than a friendly attitude towards the drug called alcohol. He was there to give them sime idea of the views of old country physicians, of whom the B. M. A. formed a majority. Years ago the association had urged the government to take more active steps to advance temperance in the nation, and on the whole, the profession in England was as hostile to alcohol as in Canada. Not only was this true in Canada. Not only was this true in regard to alcohol as a beverage, but as

The British Medical Temperance Association was increasing in power and influence, and In 1882, when Sir Victor was a student, the values of the two commodities used in these hospitals was equal, and two years ago they had changed their relative positions, milk having cost $40,000 and alcohol only $15,00.

"I am an example of transitional architecture my self." he declared in speaking of the two traditions under which he had his training. In the infirmary at Salisbury 25 years ago f300 had been spent annually on alcohol. Last year the cott was f7. This was due to no mere change of opinion, but to an evolution of knowledge. The change began with surgery, and as a surgeon he was not prejudiced in its favor.
