The particular reason for the reorganization at this time is the approaching municipal elections, and the purpose to do all in their power to advance the interests of the party.

Mayor Mowat is likely to be again a candidate for mayor, and it is said to be the intention to have party candidates for the aldermanic positions in each ward.

Montreal Accountant Says Ontario Smash Would Not Have Occurred.

Montreal, Oct. 31.—(Special.)—"If here had been an independent audit, I do not think the Ontario Bank smash could ever have happened. Certainly what was being done could never have run on."

This is the opinion of A. F. C. Ross of the well-known firm of P. S. Ross & Sons, chartered accountants, on the question of an independent bank audit for the banks of Canada. "How would an audit work, in re-vealing any wrongdoing?" Mr. Ross was asked.

"One of the most important parts of an audit," he replied, "would be to verify the existing securities. If this were done properly, it would not only show what the existing securities consisted of, but also where they were and who controlled them."

"It has been suggrested that auditors who controlled them."

"It has been suggested that auditors here would not be competent to carry out a bank audit. Do you see any difficulty in the way of the independent audit system being introduced here?"

Men Available.

"There should be no more difficulty in auditing the books of a bank than in auditing those of any other financial institution. There is not the slightest foundation for the suggestion that the accountants here could not audit a bank's accounts just the same as any other accounts. If the independent audit system for banks were instituted here next year, there are plenty of men ready and able to carry it out properly. There would be no trouble about that."

"It has been suggested that the share-

"It has been suggested that the share-holders might select a dishonest audi-tor. How would the independent audit tor. How would the independent audit system work out, as a safeguard, do you think, in that connection?"

"Well, there is always the risk that a dishonest auditor may be chosen for any auditing, but it is obvious that there would be far less likelihood of a dishonest auditor being chosen by the shareholders of a bank or any other institution than by the bank officials themselves. Moreover, there would be no object in an independent auditor being dishonest, unless, of course, he had been bought."

"Assuming that only the books at has reassembled, and placed the o'd officers in their former positions.

Meantime, the only heed the government seem to have paid to the clamor of their Kingston supporters, and the dire threats of The Whig, was to change Major Shannon from the paymastership to the position of staff-admits at in Lordon. Independent of the conduction of the paymastership to the position of staff-admits at the position of staff-admits at the position of staff-admits at the position of the position of staff-admits at the position of the position of the paymastership to the position of staff-admits at the position of the position of the position of staff-admits at the position of th recognized here as experts for the pur-pose of auditing bank accounts? I can tell you that sometimes the banks call in an auditor to audit the accounts of a concern which has got into trouble and is in their hands. And sometimes we find that altho the bank inspectors have inspected the books of that concern, and altho they know very well precisely how the concern was being managed, and how the accounts were going, they never made the slightest attempt to alter matters or to institute the most elementary principles of book.

"Assuming that only the books at the head office were audited, would it be possible for the management of a bank to so cook the books, either of their branch offices or of their head offices or of their head offices as to deceive an independent auditor, if he did his work thoroly?"

"That is rather a hard question to answer. If there were collusion between the manager and several of the bank clerks, it would be very hard for an auditor to find it out. But no manager as the securities were concerned, and deceive an auditor who did his work thereof.
