LABATT'S PORTER!

Undoubtedly the BEST brewed on the continent. PROVED to be so by Analyses of four Chemists, and by awards of the World's Great Exhibitions, especially Chicago, 1893, where it received 96 points out of a hundred—much higher than any other Porter in United States or Canada.

WOMEN WHO BET.

A Scene That is Presented Exclusively at Famous Saratoga.

At the centre of the long upper promenade of the grand stand at the Saratoga racetrack is an inconspicuous little room, tucked away from too curious eyes, bearing the non-committal information tacked over the doorway, "For use of ladies only." This is the famous "Ladies' Book," the only one of its kind in America. Nowhere is betting on the races so freely indulged in by the gentler and usually wiser sex as at Saratoga, and nowhere is so little money wagered on a race. While at the big city tracks a few women will risk hundreds on their choice, here almost every woman in the stand yields to the temptation to "put a dollar on, just for fun, you know." To meet this demand, and avoid the heavy shaving of odds indulged in by the messenger boys, the "Ladies' Book" was organized at the track two years ago. The association declares that, as a matter of fact, the sums staked are so small that it does not pay financially, and is run merely as an accommodation.

Through the door of this little room, perched on the back of the stand like an huge bird cote, a constant stream of gorgeously plumed feminine birds of paradise fly in and out. They are of all sorts and conditions of women. Soberly dressed, severely visaged mamas watch through their gold-rimmed glasses the disappearance of their husbands' wings ward after imaginary cigars and slip quietly out of their seats to join the diamond-studded trainers' wives, who boldly enter to play their husbands' "sure things." Here and there a huge negress elbows the trim, quiet maid from Fifth-avenue.

Within the room, behind a long counter, stands the bookmaker, Mr. J. P. Newman. There is practically nothing for him to do until the jockeys' names are posted. A few women play the biggest odds; a much larger number play a pretty name; but nine women out of ten invest on the mounts of their favorite jockey.

As soon as the riders are known the place fills up rapidly. Soon there is a long and anxious line behind a deliberate, grey-haired lady, with the air of a New England "school marm." After carefully adjusting her glasses she looks over the slate with so exact a bargain counter air that one expects to hear her say: "Cut me off two yards of Maher's mount, please." The careful inspection finished, she asks, "How much do you pay on No. 7 here?"

"Just what it is marked, 5 to 1, madam."

"Oh, is that all? I don't think I care for that. Now this No. 2, 'Dear Heart,' that's a pretty name. What kind of a horse is that?"

The odds layer assures her of his deep ignorance as to the virtues of the different steeds.

"Well, I should think you ought to know. Is Clawson riding anything? They say he is very good."

Clawson's mount is pointed out.

"Oh, Miss Soak! I don't like that name. Couldn't you let me have 6 to 1 on that No. 7?"

By this time the comments of the infuriated women behind her have grown distinctly audible. She suddenly discovers that she is an object of hatred, becomes "rattled," lays down a $5 bill, takes a dollar's worth of No. 11 by mistake and forgets to wait for her change. The girl behind her in the picture hat is a refreshing contrast, laying down the exact amount. She explains:

"I want Gallihead, 3 to 1 to win, and Sir Hubert, 6 to 1, a place," and walks off in the proud consciousness that she has exhibited the true professional air.

A tall, regal looking girl, clad in a deep violet gown that is a marvel of expensive simplicity, stands by the door anxiously looking out. Two women that have just entered see her and stop suddenly.

"There she is," whispers one to the other. "She's waiting for him to give her the tip. They say she made $20 yesterday. Let's wait and see what she plays." A minute later a dapper, smooth shaven man enters hurriedly, says something to the violet clad girl and as hurriedly disappears. As she approaches the counter the two women crowd close behind to hear what she says. To their intense chagrin she leans over and whispers it confidentially to the bookmaker.

"Can't you tell me what that girl in purple just played?" asks the first of the pair to reach the book. Mr. Newman, with a smile of bland, angelic innocence assures her that he has totally forgotten.

"Oh, dear, I know she's found out the winner from that man. Let's see, it must be that 100 to 1 shot. Give me $2 on him to win, please." And they depart, happy in the security that they have a good thing, and will plan how to spend the money five times over before the horses go to the post.

The next in line approaches with an air of grim determination and deep emotion. Putting her hand down over her money on the counter, for fear it will be grabbed, she demands:

"Two dollars on the horse Spencer rides."

"All right," replies the "bookie," "Four dollars to two, Ben Hadad."

"What's that, young man? Four dollars? You have just given that other lady $6 to two."

"Odds have gone down; only 2 to 1 now."

"But you just gave that other lady 3 to 1."

The bookmaker sighs despairingly, knowing what is before him, and starts in, but to all his demonstrations, arguments and explanations comes the unvarying reply:

"But you just gave that other lady 3 to 1." With a final triumphant citing of the case of the "other lady" she sweeps up her $2 bill and stalks off with a parting fling about "being robbed."

Now for a time, things run smoothly. The majority of the customers have made up their minds beforehand and the business is conducted with that peculiar hushed voice and absence of demonstration that mark a well conducted gambling room.

There is no exhibition of excitement and a total absence of the trembling fingers so often seen in the ring below. Perhaps it is because the bets are so small; perhaps, after all, women have better control of themselves in public than men. Be the reason what it may, the ladies' book is the quietest place on the grand stand.

By-and-bye trouble commences again. A woman lays down a dollar and two tenpiece.

"I want Buella to come 1, 2, 3," she says, "What's the 20 cents for, madam?"

She manages to express with her eyebrows her deep contempt for his stupidity, and repeats, slowly and distinctly, as if instructing a little child:

"I tell you I want Buella to come 1, 2, 3; that's 40 cents for first, 40 cents for second, and 40 cents for third. I couldn't give you 33 1-3 cents, could I?"

It takes four precious minutes to explain that if she bets on the horse to come third she will win if it comes first or second. When she at last retires instructed the bookmaker turns to the stunning woman next in order with a sigh of relief.

"I want $3 on Dear Heart," she explains and starts to go.

She is called back and reminded that she forgot to leave her money.

The bugle call to the post sends the crowd scurrying out to look at the horses, while another crowd scurries in at the 11th hour. Women are noted for betting at the last moment; perhaps it takes them all the time between races to make up their minds. So the room is filled when the cry of "They're off!" sets the grand stand buzzing. There is a rush to the door, and amid the silence of the deserted room the bookmaker quietly but earnestly relieves himself of 30 minutes' bottled up profanity.

Fooling a Congregation.

Chicago Post.

One of the public library attendants has a curious story. There was a handsome, impressive-looking man of 30 or 35 years who used to come into the big reading-room every Saturday afternoon and call for a book of sermons. Sometimes it was Beecher, sometimes it was Talmage. Sometimes it was one of the older preachers. But he always kept the book in the farthest corner he could find unoccupied, and there he would be seen to be committing the text and discourse to memory.

One Sunday evening the library attendant went to a little church on the West Side, and there saw his Saturday visitor standing in the pulpit. The man explained the difficulty of getting good preachers to attend to the wants of the people in that little place and the need of those same people for the best, and then he explained that he had committed to memory the sermon of a celebrated divine, and he would, as he had on several former occasions, give it to them as best he could.

And he made a good job of it. He was evidently untrained in elocution and in methods of delivery, but he had a certain natural strength and a native sense of the right inflection and emphasis; and he certainly was himself moved by the fervor and wording and by the beauty of the pictures presented in those remembered passages. The service was all anyone could have asked, and the people seemed delighted. They showered compliments on the speaker and asked him to serve them in like manner again.

It happened that the library attendant heard that same man again and at another church some weeks later. Again he delivered, after telling the name of the author, a borrowed sermon. Months afterward the attendant heard him for the third time, and it struck him that the sermon was by no means like those he had heard before. He doubted that it was the composition of the preacher to whom it was credited. Indeed, his better trained observation told him it was not a borrowed sermon at all. As the speaker came to the peroration, he was convinced this was fully original, although it had been announced as taken from a volume, which, however, no one in the house had ever before heard of.

When the service had ended the attendant waited and greeted the preacher.

"I have seen you a good many times at the public library," he said. Then he added, so that no one else could hear: "But I don't believe this sermon was taken from a book. I believe it was your own."

"Heavens!" exclaimed the preacher, in terror. "Don't tell them. They think it is borrowed. Don't, for the love of their souls, tell them it is my own. They wouldn't respect me at all if they knew I made it up. They think they are listening to a $10,000 man. I don't cost them a cent."

THE BALLON BURST.

Prof. Dennis Dropped 200 Feet to the Earth, the Parachute Failing to Work.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Sept. 15.—Prof. Dennis, an aeronaut, attempted a parachute drop at the Fair here yesterday, but met with an accident that is likely to cost him his life. Dennis ascended successfully until about 200 feet from the ground, when the balloon burst. The parachute failed to open until within a few feet of the earth, against which the aeronaut was dashed with scarcely diminished velocity. It is feared that his injuries will prove fatal.

Jurymen Selected.

Mayor Shaw, Warden Woodcock, Treasurer J. K. Macdonald, Judge Morgan, Judge McDougall and Sheriffs Widdifield and Mowat, constituting the County Board of Jury Selectors, met yesterday in H. E. Irwin's office at the Court House. Those who will serve on the juries for next year were selected.

ELECTRICITY vs. RHEUMATISM!

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, or Sciatica, don't endure another hour of ceaseless, excruciating agony.

The very worst cases, even those which have run on for years, yield at once to the powerful electric current generated by

Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt.

This is one of the many thousand Testimonials we have on file.
READ THIS:

THE SANDEN ELEC. CO., DALHOUSIE, N.B.

GENTLEMEN: After being a cripple for many years and hearing of your wonderful belts, I made up my mind to purchase one of them, and am pleased to be able to say to-day that after having worn the belt which you ordered for only eight days. I can now dispense with the same and am now completely cured. I will be glad to recommend the belt to any person suffering from rheumatism, etc. Yours truly, B. C. CHIVERTON.

Remember that these belts cure immediately Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Weak Kidneys, Lame Back, etc., etc. Electric Suspensory for men given free with each belt. DOCTOR HOWARD,
Manager Orien's Mfg. Co.,
Carleton Place, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—I have been a great sufferer from Piles. The last attack was the most severe I have experienced. For ten days I could neither sit nor stand, and walking was out of the question, so great was my suffering. I could find no relief anywhere until your Pile Ointment was recommended to me. I got a box. I was relieved by the first application. In two days I was able to resume work and felt perfectly cured within a week. I volunteer this testimonial. I desire that people who suffer as I have done may know where to get such prompt relief as I found in the use of Orien's Pile Ointment. [Signed] ANDREW JENKINS,
