The Hosiery Opportunity of the Winter

BUYING a supply of stockings now is like buying flour or sugar or some standard staple of constantly useful, necessary sort when for some accidental reason market prices in those commodities go down.

But staples like sugar and flour never go down so far in proportion to their everyday value as hosiery prices do in this store during the February sale. And yet stockings are staple enough, goodness knows!

When one thinks what a contrast this Sale makes with the tedious knitting of no more than a generation ago, or with the expense of importing French hosiery at the time of our grandmothers, we cannot help but realize that we live in a time of positive luxury. Perhaps no influence has been more powerfully exerted to bring about this condition than that of this store. Our Hosiery Sale is but one of many instances. It remains only for our readers to realize the wonder of the prices.

The Simpson Shoe for Men

MANY a man judges a pair of boots by the price he is obliged to pay for them. If they lose their shape or split at the toe in a short time he makes excuses for them. It was some fault of his feet that did it, or something wrong in his treatment. The boots were all right—they cost $6 a pair. They must be good.

But there's a better way of judging boots than by the price, to those who understand leather, to those who understand shoemaker's workmanship.

THE VICTOR SHOE sells at $4.00 a pair. Try a pair. You'll find it gives you the wear and the appearance you want, despite its low price.

It's our own shoe, made expressly for us, and there are consequently no middle profits or expenses.
