STRONG TEUTONIC EFFORTS ALL FAIL

forces of the first army, offering the most effective resistance and making continuous counter-attacks, succeeded in holding all positions firmly and repulsing the enemy with very severe losses, capturing eight officers and 181 men.

"Between the Brenza and the Plave the enemy at dawn renewed his attacks with the most violent artillery fire, followed by an advance of dense waves of infantry. The struggle was most fierce and lasted thru the whole day. Several positions were lost more than once and promptly retaken by our troops of the fourth army, who distinguished themselves by their aggressive spirit and bravery. Towards evening the last counter-attack definitely stopped the enemy, for whom, in this sector also, the day's fighting resulted in heavy losses."

Weekly Sport Letter

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

Something akin to poignant grief is pulsing thru the bosom of the Yale, Harvard and Princeton folks. Its all because of a "sore" which the athletic authorities at these institutions pulled last spring about 1917 football.

Soon after the outbreak of war in the gentle springtime the so-called "Big Three" announced the abandonment of schedules. Perhaps redirected patriotic sentiment inspired this determination; certainly it was not an action with government approval, because at that time President Wilson and Secretary of War Baker were urging a continuance of sports in war time. In the face of those requests from the government officials of the so-called "Big Three" said "Nix on 1917 football," and kicked the schedules aside.

And now they are sorry—very, very sorry. The fact that "Big Three" is not playing variety football this year has not killed interest in the game. In fact, the enthusiasm over the gridiron sport is as great as it ever was with the Yale, Harvard and Princeton folks have just awakened to the fact that their failure to play variety football this season has taken away much of their prestige, and focused the spotlight which Yale and Harvard have tried for years to get nationwide publicity and have failed until now.

No better evidence of the fact that the "Big Three" people have come to realize their blunder can be presented than the fact that they have organized freshmen teams, and, in two instances, "informal elevens." They have tried those poor mediums to gain attention. But they have failed miserably. And all the time the football folks are realizing more and more that real football elevens are being turned out by such colleges as Pittsburg, Georgia Tech., Pennsylvania, Williams, Cornell, Washington & Jefferson, Dartmouth and other colleges which for years were ignored because the "Big Three" monopolized football attention.

Yale, Harvard and Princeton undoubtedly will be back with variety elevens in 1918, but never again can they dominate the gridiron world. They must share prominence with the other colleges; with the institutions which have brave enough and sportsmanlike enough. In 1917 to go thru with their variety schedules despite the fact that elevens had depleted their ranks of football stars; which Yale, Harvard and Princeton undoubtedly were afraid to attempt because of fear that their weakened elevens might get defeated.

Straight Football Triumphs.

The amazing record compiled by the Georgia Tech. eleven this season is a glowing tribute to old-fashioned football. Those southerners are adept in the use of the forward pass and frequently have flashed a wonderful aerial attack. But accounts of the games in which they have rolled up enormous scores show that eighty per cent. of their gains have been accomplished by the kind of football that was vogue in another day.

Runs around the end and line plunging have netted tremendous gains for the "Golden Tornadoes." The powerful backfield—Strupper, Guyon, Harlan and Hill—have torn the opposition line to shreds time and again and circled ends in a way that made even the best flank guards among their foemen look like novices. The way the Tech. backs have succeeded by the use of open football is striking testimony to the fact that old-fashioned football is still the best. After all, it is a great game. And it is the safest.

Forward passes, successfully made, may net bigger gains on the average than will end runs or around ends in a line. But when a team is forward passing there is always the chance that it may lose the ball in interception, something which cannot happen when a man is carrying the pigskin.

Yest Is Back.

One of the outstanding features of the 1917 gridiron season is the "comeback" of "Hurry-Up" Yest.

After something like thirteen years of constant effort to rank Michigan once again among the truly great, the Wolverine coach has succeeded. He is back in 1917 with an eleven that stands out as one of the most powerful that has battled in the west for many seasons, and one that would have a splendid chance for victory if pitted against either Georgia Tech., the southern champions, or Pitt., which holds the eastern title.

The odds of Michigan's showing is that with the dawn of the 1917 season, Weekes, Snaw and the others who made football history back in 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905. But there was real football ability among those youngsters, and aided by the teachings of the veteran coach they have learned the game and play it with remarkable success.

PATRIOTIC FUND IS UNDER CRITICISM

War Veterans Have Strong
Remarks to Make of Management.

Feeling ran high against the officials of the patriotic fund at last evening's meeting of C company, G.W.V.A., and in the course of an extended discussion as to the best means of dealing with that association, Secretary A. Gustaf openly accused the officials of the fund of dishonesty, stating that he had it on the best authority that graft was rampant among those in charge of the fund's disbursements. Several members advocated the plan of going up to the office of the fund and having an interview with the officials of the city for the purpose of drawing public attention to the question at issue. Secretary Gustaf told the large gathering that he would publicly extract a promise from Major Cockburn to call the attention of the Canadian Government to the mismanagement of the patriotic fund, in the event of his election.

Other important matters were dealt with at the meeting, notably the suggestions of the headquarters executive relative to the reorganization of the G.W.V.A., the suggested increase of dues on several occasions, and the suggestion that a copy of the constitution be sent to each member of the company, and the idea of enabling the members to more thoroughly direct the ideas suggested. The G.W.V.A. now numbers more than 3000 members.

The association has requested a formal declaration of policy from the candidates for the Toronto and York ridings. The following explicit communication was received from W. F. Maclean, candidate in South York:

Dear Sir: I have always been in favor of fair and more than fair treatment for the soldiers and their dependents in connection with this war, and as I have said on several occasions, both in the house and out of it, and in "The World" newspaper, I am in favor of and will support any measure for better pensions for soldiers in this war and the dependents of soldiers who have been killed or injured, and for an increase in the separation allowance of soldiers' dependents during the war. I will withhold anything that will recognize the full and splendid sacrifices in this war made by the soldiers and their dependents. Yours truly, W. F. Maclean.

PARENTAGE A MESSAGE

HOURS PASSED BEFORE MEDICAL OFFICER CAME

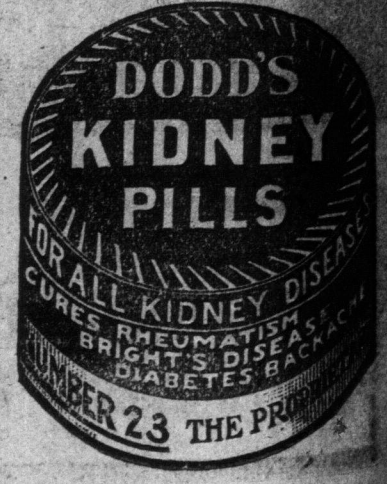

Further Evidence Given at Inquest Into Death of Soldier in Base Hospital.

The inquest into the death of Lance-Corporal Joseph Hughes, who, it is alleged, died as the result of injuries received when he was assaulted by Pte. Patrick J. McManus in the base hospital, General street, was opened last night in the morgue by Coroner George W. Graham. Several witnesses were called, the first being Capt. Harold Kinsey, the officer in charge of the ward to which Hughes was brought after the assault. He gave evidence to the effect that Hughes was brought to his ward unconscious on Nov. 13, and remained in that condition until he died on Nov. 16.

Lance-Corporal Frank Virtue, Central Ontario Regiment, was in the cell at the time Hughes was assaulted. He said he had noticed that McManus was acting very queerly and that he jumped to any sudden noise. He also seemed to be suffering from a hallucination regarding Hughes' eyes, and when the latter looked at him he would say, "Take those off." He seemed to get enraged at Hughes, and got up and struck him between the eyes while he was lying down. Hughes attempted no resistance, but when he went over to get some of his clothes, which were hanging over McManus' bed, McManus got up and struck him again, knocking him down for the second time. He tried to get up, but fell to the floor, and McManus picked him up and threw him on to the bed, striking his head against the wall. Hughes lay unconscious until the medical officer came in some time later. When asked why he didn't try to get
