of muscular exercise. Hence the circumstances best calculated to improve the condition of the farmer, are those which call into proper action the intellectual and physical powers with which he is naturally endowed. But there are now, fortunately, many farmers whose labours are not so constant as to interfere with the improvement of their minds; many, indeed, are thinking and reading men; and we are forced to conclude that it is more from lack of inclination than the existence of real obstacles, that the class is not more numerous. The long winter evenings and stormy days, afford many hours of leisure, during which a great amount of useful information might be gathered from the reading of agricultural books and pamphlets.
