NEW YORK'S GASLESS SUNDAY. (New York Times.) Again Sunday found New York practically 100 per cent loyal to the fuel administration's mandate that no vehicles run by gasoline power be used for pleasure purposes. Fifth avenue, Riverside drive, and the bridges and highways leading out of the city into the suburbs, were comparatively deserted excepting for horse-drawn vehicles and automobiles carrying physicians' signs. Garages in all parts of the city reported that they had not sold a gallon of gasoline during the day.
