SMART SET OF LONDON HAVE SOMETHING NEW

Upper Crust of English Bohemian Society Unconventional in Theatre Cabaret

PARIS LIFE REPRODUCED

Features of the Cafe Chat Noir Brought to London—Princesses and Scarcely Lesser Fry Mix With Unwashed Geniuses of the Arts

(Times Special Correspondence.) London, March 14—Follow the 'Weather Vane,' follow the 'Weather Vane!'

That is, if you wish to mingle with the titled section of London's bohemian society. Yes, you'll find them all, ladies, more about-town, famous authors of both sexes, musicians with long hair and artists with long ties, nibbling caviare sandwiches and sipping green, yellow, black and white cordials in the Theatre Cabaret, London's latest attempt to be smart and unconventional in the English manner.

The 'Weather Vane' about town show you the way to this bit of Paris's Montmartre set down in the heart of London and if you follow their directions you can, upon the payment of $2.50 rub shoulders with the cleverest in the land, stare as long as you like at a duchess or even a princess, perhaps enter into conversation with half a dozen of the unlashed and unbuttoned geniuses of the four arts, and at least you can see a performance of the like of which is not to be found elsewhere on this side of the English Channel.

For this inimitable boon, this latest attempt to break the gloom that clutches the people of England about the theatre, a clever woman is responsible. She is Miss Floyd Arlison, and up to the time she started the people of London by opening the Theatre Cabaret she was chiefly known as a singer of nigger melodies.

Copying from Paris Her idea is to reproduce the best features of the famous Cafe Chat Noir of Paris, making her little theatre the meeting place of high bohemian society and the musings, unbuttoned, unbuttoned and unbuttoned of the realm of music, literature, art and the drama. From her little stage or from the seats of a chair surrounded by the sympathetic audience, budding poets rise and before your eyes and ears blossom forth into brilliant flowers.

Unwashed artists, fresh from Chelsea, dressed in blue jerseys, who have knocked in vain at the portals of the Royal Academy, hump themselves in the corners and ply their sketching pencils. Long-haired violinists and pianists, a few and Beethoven and Chopin, while imitation Mand Allans and Pavarotti caper about the dimly lit stage.

But while it is all quite unreal and so, it is nevertheless an interesting experiment. And, judging by the rapid way it has become the rage among a certain class of moneyed Bohemians it will be a success. Already more than 100 of the members of the London society have become permanent subscribers to the theatre and it has been determined to form a club around the little theatre. New quarters will be opened close to Piccadilly, the centre of the night life of London, and the members of the London society will come on to the performance after their usual London theatre has closed its doors.

The evening the real fun will not begin until about half past eleven and will continue into the small hours of the next morning.

The present home of the Theatre Cabaret is a weird affair. It reproduces the atmosphere of the continental cafe. Artists have been turned loose on the seats and decorations with a series of 'Cubism' and 'Futurism,' the newest art of arts, have been wedded to the tricks of the poster artist, and a series of astonishing results decorated the four walls of the little theatre.

The bizarre figure of a 300-pound circus as it might appear to a reveller who has drunk no share of wisdom with his drinking. These two are easy to guess but the other pictures are evidently meant to be puzzles, to the solution of which even the artists themselves have no clue.

If you arrive early enough you will see the artist, and perhaps a few features of the resort. And you must arrive early, else you will find all the seats taken and perhaps a few women in evening dress perched on the counter of the bar at the back, in the absence of the usual Bohemian.

It has been well described as 'three Egyptian gentlemen chasing a giraffe across a map of the East,' that is as good a description as it is possible to give.

About the little hall are arranged tiny deal tables, around which are gathered the mixed audience in groups of four or five. Evening dress predominates among both the men and women and among a considerable section there is a spirit of decorum which hardly fits in with the surroundings. But the true bohemian spirit is found among several of the groups and there is soon a delightful air of freedom about the hall. Everybody seems to know everybody else, and there is a constant changing of seats to exchange a few words with acquaintances.

In the rear of the hall Maurice Hewlett, an author, is seated with a small party of friends. His grey hair and moustache and little tuft of hair under his lower lip mark him out from the rest of the audience. Near the front Austin Harrison, editor of the English Review, is seated with a large party of friends. Close by is Lionel de Rothschild, richest of London's bachelors, while half way to the door is Her Highness the Rance of Sarawak, indefatigable supporter of everything new and smart. Over against the wall is Florence, Lady Clarke-Jervoise and close by is Mrs. Alec Tweedie, an author.

Scattered about the room are Princess Irene Wisniewski, Mrs. Curzon Newton, Lady Fitzpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Heim and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bradshaw.

An Evening's Programme A little after nine o'clock the drop curtain is raised and Miss Floyd Arlison appears to announce the evening's entertainment. She is greeted with a truly bohemian shout of welcome. She usually starts the ball rolling with a couple of her coon

A REASONABLE PLEA FOR THE STOMACH

If Your Stomach is Lacking in Digestive Power, Why Not Help the Stomach Do Its Work?

Especially when it Costs Nothing to Try

Not with drugs, but with a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach? Stomach ailments show that digestion requires pepsin, nitrogenous ferments, and the secretion of hydrochloric acid. When your food fails to digest, it is a proof positive that some of these agents are lacking in your digestive apparatus.

Stuart's Dyppepsia Tablets contain nothing but these natural elements necessary to digestion and when placed at work in the weak stomach, and small intestine, supply what these organs need. They stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

Stuart's Dyppepsia Tablets have been analyzed by original chemical tests at home and abroad and are found to contain nothing but natural digestive agents.

Consult a Laboratory. Telephone address, 'DIPPEPSIA,' London. Telephone No. 11029 Central, 30 Colburn St., Fenchurch St., E. C.

London, 6th Aug., 1905. I have analyzed most carefully a box of Stuart's Dyppepsia Tablets (which I bought myself at a city chemist's shop for the purpose), manufactured by the F. A. Stuart Co., Clarendon Road, London, E. C., and have to report that I can find no trace of vegetable or mineral poison. Knowing the ingredients of the tablets, I am of opinion that they are admirably adapted for the purpose for which they are intended.

(Signed) John R. Brooke, F. I. C., F. C. S. There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyppepsia Tablets. Their composition is commonly known among physicians as it is shown by the recommendations of 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, water break, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and kindred diseases originating from improper digestion and assimilation of food, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyppepsia Tablets are at once a safe and a powerful remedy, one grain of the active principle in these tablets being strong enough (by test) to digest 3,000 grains of steak, eggs and other foods. Stuart's Dyppepsia Tablets will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

Ask your druggist for a fifty cent box, or send us direct for a free trial sample package and you will be surprised at the result. F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

TRANSLATING SHAKESPEARE. According to the story, three French boys were studying a volume of Shakespeare in their own tongue, their task being to render portions of it into English. When they came to Hamlet's famous soliloquy, 'To be or not to be,' their respective translations were as follows: (1) 'To be or not to be,' (2) 'To be or not to be,' (3) 'To be or not to be,' (4) 'To be or not to be,' (5) 'To be or not to be,' (6) 'To be or not to be,' (7) 'To be or not to be,' (8) 'To be or not to be,' (9) 'To be or not to be,' (10) 'To be or not to be.'

The boys of Washington Academy, East Machias, Me., have started to earn money for uniforms and outfit for the baseball team by sawing the academy wood.
